Halt-Blast Drive Fails

Amchitka Test On Schedule

Times News Services

A chorus of protests, official and otherwise, failed to halt a scheduled underground nuclear explosion on Amchitka Island in the North Pacific today.

And the United States Atomic Energy Commission said this morning three earthquakes in California overnight and early today in no way affected its plans.

Thousands of persons in Canada and elsewhere have protested the Amchitka blast, fearing it would cause a tremor in the earthquake-prone Aleutian chain.

More Than 7,000 Protest

Protests reached a climax Wednesday with demonstrations along the Canadian-United States border involving more than 7,000 students in British Columbia alone. The student protest, conceived by the University of Victoria student union, was enacted at points from Halifax to Victoria.

(See stories on pages 3 and 40 for details on Vancuover and local demonstrations Wednesday.)

Canada and Japan, both damaged by the 1964 Alaska earthquake, have filed formal objections with Washington.

Meanwhile, Alaska Gov. Keith Miller again defended the test, saying he is convinced the protests are "a result of a well-financed, highly organized international movement."

Tidal Wave News at 8:30 p.m.

Scientists at Victoria's Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain said today the shock waves from the blast would register on their seismic monitors approximately seven minutes after the 3 p.m. explosion.

If a tidal wave is generated by the nuclear test, they say, it will reach Tofino on Vancouver Island's west coast about 8:30 p.m. tonight.

Emergency measures organizations, municipal, provincial and state authorities and civil defence systems were poised today for action should the blast trigger a tidal wave.

At Port Alberni, which suffered heavy damage in a tidal wave following the 1964 earthquake, civic authorities have established an elaborate warning and evacuation plan which would be triggered by an alert from Victoria.

The Washington State Civil Defence System is prepared to alert coastal communities if a need for evacuation arises, and various U.S. agencies are planning increased radiation monitoring this month in connection with the blast.

On windswept Amchitka Island, 1,400 miles southwest of Anchorage, Alaska, scientists and technicians made ready monitoring devices and television cameras to record the one-megaton blast, equal to the detonation of 1,000,000 tons of TNT.

Robert Miller, operations manager for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, told reporters Wednesday:

EARTHQUAKE KILLS 10

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Ten persons were killed and 50 injured in an earthquake Wednesday in the central state of Junin, authorities reported today.

The tremor destroyed about 300 houses in several small villages near Huancayo, about 180 miles east of Lima.

Marine Service Cut Back

By PAT DUFOUR

Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to reduce federal government spending has thrown a left hook at the Victoria Marine Services Base.

Larry Slaght, district manager of the department of transport's marine services branch, said today his operating budget has lost more than $400,000.

This is the amount expected to be paid in salaries and wage increases during the current fiscal year.

The money won't come from the government's central fund as in past years, but from the base's budget of $4.8 million.

Slaght says balancing his budget will probably require laying off one of three servicing vessels (Estevan, Douglas or Camsell) for the winter season.

Depending on the effectiveness of other economy measures, he adds, it may be necessary to put one vessel in mothballs completely.

Slaght is confident the reductions will not mean dismissal of permanent employees.

"However," he adds, "it does mean that a lot of casual labor such as stewards and oilers, will have to go."

NEW METHODS

He says his department will have to develop new methods of operation in order to maintain efficiency and still remain within his budget.

"We will have to use helicopters more than we do now. We have three based at Pat Bay. The weather ships Quadra and Vancouver will be closed down while in port and maintenance work done by day labor, rather than the permanent crew."

Slaght has 30 lighthouse stations and about 600 unwatched lights in his area. He says that it will be necessary to switch to more semi-automatic stations. Major construction will be reduced where it does not involve service efficiency.

"Some of our lighthouse-keepers with dilapidated living quarters may have to wait a while for repairs."

He says the government's decision to spend $1 billion on northern development is the main reason for reduction.

Capital Gains Tax Studied by Tories

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called today for an easing of the tax burden on lower-income groups and said there are strong equity arguments for a capital gains tax.

He told the Empire Club here that he strongly feels "the present level of exemptions on personal income tax just cannot be justified in terms of its relative burden on lower income groups."

Mr. Stanfield said exemption levels should be adjusted for the lower-income groups, but not at the expense of introducing new inequities for those in higher brackets.

Revenue lost from the adjustment must be found elsewhere, he said.

"If you are doctrinaire about these things, it is easy enough to talk about socking it to those in, say, the $10,000 to $20,000 a year group.

"But they already pay a heavier personal income tax than their counterparts in the U.S. So long as the brain drain concerns us, we should try to avoid a tax system that places us at too great a disadvantage vis-a-vis the U.S. in this respect."

TAX REFORM

Mr. Stanfield also said a capital gains tax, as part of an over-all package of tax reform, "has to be given very serious consideration."

It would not be a good policy to simply pile a capital gains tax on top of the present system, he said.

"Certainly, on grounds of equity, there are strong arguments for taxing capital gains as well as income.

Mr. Stanfield said the Conservative party policy conference in Niagara Falls, Ont. Oct. 9-13 will have to take into account several important practical considerations related to a capital gains tax.

"For example, what special consideration can be devised with regard to gains arising from the sale of the family farm, the family home or the family business.

"Again, since most capital gains arise over a relatively long period of time, what account should be taken of this in establishing rates?

These questions must be considered in the context of the whole tax system.

"I believe a capital gains tax proposal could only be implemented in the context of a system where the rate structure applying to all types of income is appropriate and does not seem to be confiscatory."

EARTHQUAKE damage in California, from strongest tremors recorded in that state in 12 years, includes Santa Rosa hotel wall which collapsed (left) crushing car examined by patrolman (right). Three separate tremors, two Wednesday night and one early today, injured at least 24 persons, disrupted electrical service and broke gas and water mains. There was no report of fatalities. TREMORS HINT RUSSIA TESTING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission has reported another seismic disturbance from a region of the Soviet Union used for underground nuclear tests.

The first disturbance, announced Sunday, was recorded south of Volgograd. A disturbance was recorded Wednesday in the Semipalainsk region of Siberia, the AEC said.

While unable to determine the cause of the disturbances, the AEC indicated they were caused by the explosion of a low to intermediate range nuclear device, comparing with detonation of 20,000 to 200,000 tons of TNT.

Grain Hopes Rise At Gromyko Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government is optimistic that Russia will agree to buy a huge quantity of wheat still outstanding under the 1966 Soviet-Canadian wheat agreement, a qualified source said today.

Fulfilment by the Soviet Union of the terms of the agreement would mean a big boost for the ailing Western Canada farm economy. Some 133,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour remain to be purchased under the three-year deal, which technically expired two months ago.

An external affairs department spokesman, giving reporters a fill-in on talks here today between Canadian officials and visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, said the Canadian side was "satisfied" with the progress of discussions on the wheat deal.

These discussions occupied about one-third of the 2½ hours which the Russians and Canadians, led by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, spent in closed conference.

The official refused to elaborate. Asked a further question later, however, he said the Canadian side is optimistic the remaining grain will be sold to the Soviets.

DISCUSS OTHER SUBJECTS

This was the strongest expression of hopefulness yet made by a Canadian official that the Soviets will eventually honor their obligations. He emphasized that Canada has never stated that Russia is in default on the deal.

Discussion of the wheat deal was to be taken up again at subsequent meetings during Mr. Gromyko's two-day visit here, which ends Friday.

Other topics touched upon today included Soviet-Canadian scientific and cultural exchanges, and the comparative positions of the two sides in respect to the application of international law to Arctic waters.

California Quake Worst in 12 Years

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP)—At least 24 persons were injured by two earthquakes that ruined two houses here Wednesday night, knocked out electrical power and broke gas and water mains.

No fatalities were reported.

A third tremor, milder than the first two, was recorded between 5:27 and 5:28 a.m. PDT today.

The tremors centred at Santa Rosa, 60 miles north of San Francisco, but were felt as far south as Gilroy, 75 miles south of San Francisco.

A 20-foot wide section of brick wall fell from the third storey of the Miramar Bar to the street, heavily damaging a parked automobile.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. said electrical power was off for eight minutes in the city of nearly 50,000 residents. The utility called in emergency crews and had 50 men shutting off leaking gas mains. One small fire was extinguished before there was serious damage.

Water from broken pipes caused damage in one department store.

MOST WERE OUT

Injured persons were taken to three hospitals in the Santa Rosa area. Most suffered cuts caused by broken glass, although there was one report of a broken neck.

One house was jolted four feet off its foundations and another was so badly rocked that it probably will have to be torn down.

Seismologists at the University of California in Berkeley said the first quake was at 9:56 p.m. PDT and the second

AIR SERVICE HAMPERED BY WALKOUTS

TORONTO (CP) — Airline schedules from Regina to Ottawa were threatened today as a wildcat strike of 120 Ontario airport technicians spread to Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The 120 Ontario technicians, members of Local 2228, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, were joined this morning by 100 Winnipeg members of the union, affecting operations at Winnipeg International Airport.

Haynsworth Withdrawal?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional sources said today Judge Clement F. Haynsworth has asked President Nixon to withdraw his nomination for a seat on the United States Supreme Court, but the White House said its latest information "indicates that this report is absolutely untrue."

Girls Fire-Bomb U.S. Consulate

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two girls were being sought by police today, following a fire-bomb incident Wednesday at the U.S. Consulate office, on the second floor of a downtown building.

Witnesses saw one girl, aged about 20, throw a plastic bottle toward the office. It hit the door jamb and exploded into flames, damaging the floor and wall.

The girls fled down a fire exit, but were caught within seconds by Vice-Consul Norman Del Giante and consulate customer Dilip Nelson.

"We brought them upstairs and I opened the lobby door to see how bad the fire was," said Mr. Nelson. "The flames shot into my face and burned my eyebrows off. The girls ran away again. I ran after one and caught her.

"I was holding her against the wall and said: 'Cool it, you started the fire.' She said: 'Yeah, man, they were going to kill millions Thursday.'

"Then the building commissionaire came up. He told us to sort out our troubles outside the place and I told him the girl had started a fire on the second floor.

"He wrenched my arm away and she got away again."

Consul-General Milton C. Rewinkle said the bomb missed the door and bounced off into the lobby.

"If it had come in it would have gone right under the desk of our young receptionist," he said. "It would have been disastrous.

Other witnesses said they saw the girls carrying the bottle in the lobby. "There's a bomb in there—everyone get out," the girls said.

No Proof Biafra Mercenaries Coming From Canada, UN Told

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canadian officials said Wednesday a charge by federal Nigeria's foreign affairs spokesman that Canadians are serving as mercenaries in breakaway Biafra was unproven.

Canadians here were visibly startled when Okoi Arikpo, Nigeria's external affairs minister, told the General Assembly that Canadians were among nationals of several Western nations fighting with the Biafrans in the Nigerian civil war.

The unofficial attitude among members of the Canadian delegations was one of hurt. They pointed out that Canada has attempted to play a neutral role in the war and has poured millions of dollars of aid into the western African area.

Arikpo told the Assembly:

"There is no longer any secret from where the rebel regime, which has no economic resources and which for two years had no export trade whatsoever, continues to obtain the hard currency to pay for the modern weapons it uses against the fatherland and with which it pays those mercenaries from Sweden, France, Canada, Portugal, Belgium, South Africa, Rhodesia, the United States of America and other Western countries. . . ."

SHARP

AERIAL WAR

These "racist renegades and their compeers" had openly raised money in their own countries "with which they wage a war, often an aerial war, against Nigeria, and with which they finance and conduct a campaign of vilification" aimed at dismembering Nigeria.

Canadian officials were clearly taken aback by Arikpo's speech.

External Affairs Minister Sharp had talked with Arikpo only last week and it was reported the Nigerian had given no indication he would make such a statement.

Sharp also discussed the Biafran question with Nigeria, representatives of Biafra and other African countries who support the Biafran cause while he was here.

There were indications Wednesday night that Canada was still seeking clarification of the Nigerian position and it was reported that the Canadian mission here was in touch with the external affairs department in Ottawa shortly after Arikpo's speech.

About two hours after the Nigerian spoke, the Canadian mission issued a statement saying the charge Canadians are serving as mercenaries had not been proven.

Oil Leaks $500

MONTREAL (CP) — The captain of a 3,500-ton German freighter has been fined $500 because his ship spilled about 12 gallons of crude oil into the St. Lawrence River near Montreal.

Capt. Uwe Borchers, 36, said the oil leaked from a faulty fuel coupling on his ship, the Christiane Schulte.

Towboat Strike Said Possible

Victoria labor representatives were alerted Wednesday night to the possibility of another strike against shipping on the B.C. coast.

Although negotiations are still in progress with B.C. towboat operators, the Canadian Merchant Service Guild representing more than 1,200 tugboat officers on the Canadian coast told Victoria Labor Council:

"A strike may be necessary to bring these negotiations to a successful conclusion."

A letter from the guild's western branch secretary-treasurer C. J. Rhodes asked the council to co-operate in the event of a strike and that affiliated members refrain from performing the work of towboat men. The council agreed to co-operate.

The members work 430 west coast tugs and their contract expired Sept. 30.

NOT CRITICAL

Negotiations, which have been in progress three months, have not reached a critical point, said guild business agent Gordon Mercer today. There was no greater reason to expect a breakdown than there was two weeks ago, but it was considered necessary to take precautions.

Rhodes said negotiations had been assisted by chief western conciliator Don Tysoe, of the federal labor department, during the past month.

Among the principal concerns of towboat officers are manning requirements and safety, especially aboard small vessels were automation has eliminated engineroom personnel and enabled newer tugs to produce more work in a shorter time.

Bulk of the membership lives in the Greater Vancouver area, but large segments are located in the Victoria-Nanaimo area, at Prince Rupert and in the Queen Charlottes.

Most work the entire B.C. coast and inland waterways and some are on regular B.C.-California-Mexico routes, with a few making voyages to Hawaii.

Reporting on the week-old longshoremen's strike, George Ball also asked for the support of organized labor, which the council voted to give.

The longshore spokesman later said executive members of the International Longshoremen and Warehousemen's Union Canadian area (B.C. coast) would be meeting with Vancouver Island locals tonight, probably to give a progress report.

Ball told the council there were things being said about the union's members that were unfair and he asked for the opportunity to correct wrong impressions.

ENOUGH DAYS

Statements about earnings in the $12,000-$13,000-a-year range were incorrect, he said, explaining that guaranteed annual income is only about $5,000 and that many men had not worked enough days to reach that figure in the nine months to date this year.

No paid employees of the union are on payroll during a strike; there is no strike fund, although "we look after our own"; closure of the Sooke Forest Products Mill and layoff of 350 employees could not be blamed on longshoremen, Ball said.

He said on the latter point that he could not believe the mill had exhausted its storage area due to a halt of lumber exports. He said the union is issuing passes to persons employed at Ogden Point docks, where lumber is stored for cargo assembly.

BCFP NEXT?

There has been no lumber movement at the docks since the longshore strike began.

Ball said it was possible that B.C. Forest Products would be tied up, but it was not the intention of the union "to hurt anyone. Anyone else can get a pass to work at Ogden Point," he said.

He said the union felt a moral obligation to taxpayers to handle wheat exports, as agreed to with Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, but the union had no foreknowledge of a $135 million wheat sale to China. Farmers are already heavily subsidized, Ball noted. Without export credits more tax dollars would be required to help support agriculture.

Ball said, after questioning by delegates, that there were other considerations he could not elaborate on in the promise to handle grain shipments.

A spokesman for shippers has pointed out that by handling grain, longshoremen can prolong their strike, but if maritime employers refuse to dispatch gangs for grain ship work they will be accused of prolonging the strike. Employers are already under pressure from other exporters who charge discrimination because their cargoes are not being handled.

City Hall Aid For Bowling Team Vetoed

If the Victoria Five Pin Association is to contest the 1970 Western Canada bowling championships in Vancouver, it's going to have to get there without financial aid from city council.

Council's finance committee this morning quickly vetoed an association request for $500 to cover part of the team's expenses.

"We can't start sending teams all over," said Ald. Percy Frampton.

"Let them use a little imagination to raise funds themselves," added committee chairman, Ald. Robert Baird.

Two other athletic teams got a better reception from the committee.

The committee agreed to present civic achievement medallions to the Victoria Minor Lacrosse Association Junior B Division 2 team which won the Western Canadian championship and to the Carnarvon baseball team which represented Canada at the Ponly League world series in Williamsport, Pennsylvania this year.

Indian Act Reforms Seen 5 Years Away

REGINA (CP) — It will take more than five years to return control of Indian lands to the Indians, Jean Chretien, the Indian affairs minister, told the Saskatchewan Women's Liberal Federation Thursday.

"There are 550 bands. There are over 2,000 reserves. An Indian lands act is necessary to protect the land.

"Such an act will have to be talked about, drafted, made into law and put into effect. In five years? Not at all. It was never suggested. We know, and Indian people known, that this will take time."

Mr. Chretien said debate over the government's new Indian policy announced last June "has become clouded because of misunderstandings, misinterpretation, and a lack of knowledge on the part of the Canadian public of the Indian situation."

Mr. Chretien extended an open invitation to Indian leaders to present their proposals to the government before legislation is passed and to the provinces to join in the talks.

The government plans to end special treatment for Indians, turning over to them control of their own lands and giving them the same privileges and responsibilities as other citizens.

at 11:19 p.m. and that both registered at between 5.5 and 5.6 on the Richter scale.

The Richter scale is a logarithmic scale on which each jump of one whole number represents a 10-fold step in an earthquake's magnitude.

In 1906, the San Francisco earthquake registered at 8.25.

Police, California highway patrol officers and Sonoma County sheriff's deputies sealed off a 15-square block area in downtown Santa Rosa to stop an outburst of looting through broken windows in a number of stores.

Jake Horner, civilian defence chief, told of seeing three 50-foot-high metal flag poles, which were 10 feet apart, whipping so strongly they hit each other.

"They were really clanging," he recalled.

The serious quake in 1957, rated at 5.3 on the Richter scale, was at Daly City, near San Francisco, but no damage was reported there.

Police said the first tremor that hit San Francisco was a "real heavy roller."

Buildings swayed and shuddered and windows and plaster were cracked. The telephone system was knocked out briefly.

. . . BLAST

"We are very optimistic of a safe and successful experiment."

The explosion was scheduled for 3 p.m. Victoria time.

The AEC said weather conditions appeared favorable for observer planes to fly over the desolate, 42-mile-long Aleutian island 700 miles from the Soviet Union's Kamchatka Peninsula.

The nuclear device was buried 4,000 feet below the tundra in a shaft drilled in a solid volcanic rock. Twenty-eight miles away about 130 persons gathered in a concrete bunker to check the effects of the explosion.

One television camera was zeroed in on a known earth fault that cuts through the island. Another was focused on a pen of seven sea otters 4,500 feet from the blast site to record the effect on the animals.

Pens on the beach 14,000 feet away from the test contained more sea animals.

Other observers were on the carrier Princeton, two destroyers and a number of research vessels.

First after-blast examination of the ground around the site was expected late Thursday or Friday, depending on conditions.

Fears of an earthquake and tidal wave similar to the 1964 earthquake that claimed 113 lives in Alaska and caused damage around the Pacific rim prompted most of the objection to the blast. Other opponents simply oppose the explosion of nuclear devices.

The AEC conceded the possibility of an earthquake, but said the chances were minimal.

B.C. Housing Policy Lauded

The B.C. government has promoted ownership of houses to a level well above the average for the rest of Canada, Minister Without Portfolio Grace McCarthy told Saanich and the Islands Social Credit Association's annual meeting Wednesday.

Speaking on housing in the province, she addressed a banquet of 100 party members in the Red Lion Motor Inn.

Peter Grootendorst was re-elected president of the association.

Don Ruffle was voted first vice-president; Joseph McRoberts, second vice-president; Neva Pennie, third vice-president; Carl Bitterman, fourth vice-president; Alfred House, fifth vice-president, and George Pearson, sixth vice-president.

Tenant Society Forming Tonight

Tenants will have a chance tonight to band together to battle rising rents, unjustified evictions and lack of housing.

A public meeting is planned at 8 tonight in South Park School to discuss endorsing municipal candidates who intend tackling housing and rent problems, picketing homes of landlords who treat tenants unfairly and ways to build tenant-owned apartments or homes.

Brian Jewitt, 834 Esquimalt, has been interested in forming a tenants' association for some time but not until he and his wife were evicted from their suite for protesting a 40 per cent rent increase did he launch his proposal.

"There are 175,000 people living in Victoria and surrounding area and to the best of my knowledge 50 per cent of these are tenants," Jewitt said.

"I hope to engender an organization to protect people from my experience instead of just accepting the eviction."

Jewitt and his wife received a $35 monthly increase on their rent which the new landlord said was to meet expenses. Jewitt feels in the renting world the tenant is without rights but a tenants' association would remedy this.

"The response to the idea has been very heavy," Jewitt added, "and I am interested in seeing tonight's turnout."

Newsprint Price Rises

NEW YORK (AP) — International Paper Sales Co. Inc., joined other major producers in raising newsprint prices.

Boost of $5 a ton will put International Paper's price at $152 a ton, effective next Jan. 1.

The increase was initiated last week by Bowater Paper Corp. Other producers taking similar action were Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd., Crown-Zellerback Corp., Cox Newsprint and Consolidated-Bathurst Newsprint Ltd.

Grain Moves In Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grain loading resumed today in the strike-hit Port of Vancouver after a row between management and longshoremen Wednesday brought things almost to a complete halt.

One of the three grain ships still in port was finished off and ready to sail this morning and loading resumed on the other two.

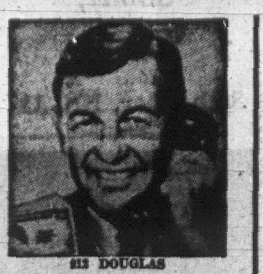

Port officials said early only that "some grain loading was going on."

The Weather and You

By CARL RIBLET JR.

When you go abruptly from a low altitude to a very high altitude, you are likely to feel unusually tired and a little bit sleepy even in midday. The reason is that there is less oxygen in the rarefied air at, say, 7,500 feet, than at 1,000 feet.

When there is less oxygen in the air, there is less oxygen to consume and your body absorbs less. After a few days you get used to the rarefied air and pretty soon you can live a normal life way up there. One reason that some lowland football teams invariably lose in games played in the highlands is the decreased amount of oxygen in the highland air.

You are more tired when you drive up to high altitudes than when you go back down. It's something like what happens to your auto engine, which uses more gas going up, because it needs more energy then, and uses less gas going down because everything is easygoing.

POLICE HAVE QUIET DAY AT STUDENT DEMONSTRATION

Protest Ends on Friendly Note

By STEVE HUME

In a decade of turmoil, confrontation and campus revolution, students and police have become polarized into almost traditional enemies.

But at the University of Victoria's massive blockade of the Black Ball ferry terminal Wednesday both sides came away with more understanding and respect for each other.

Victoria Police Chief Jack Gregory said after the protest by almost 3,000 Uvic students he was both surprised and gratified by the orderly nature of the demonstration and the attitude of marchers.

Student leaders, on the other hand, said they were extremely impressed by the masterful way the unarmed city police, under Gregory's persosal direction, kept things running smoothly without being authoritarian.

20 CAPTAINS

The students snaked the entire length of the Inner Harbor Causeway and around the corner to the ferry terminal, but they were directed precisely by 20 picket-captains who had studied overall strategy laid out the night before.

Do whatever the police ask, but do it slowly, the students were told by organizers, and they were mobilized in such a manner that they blocked the terminal exits but did not impede local pedestrian and motor traffic.

Explicit directions were handed out in leaflet form, and picket captains patrolled the line with loud-hailers to further explain instructions.

Police, meanwhile, managed to remain unobtrustive.

One picket captain pointed out he thought Gregory had managed a brilliant stroke in having just enough uniformed officers (10 in all) on hand to keep students aware of law and order, but not quite enough for constables to feel supremely confident.

'REALLY SMOOTH'

"That was really smooth," he said, "it kept everybody good and honest."

Gregory said later police on duty for the protest were not armed, for the first time in the history of the force.

It was in keeping with the buoyant, humorous attitude of the demonstrators.

"The student officials I was in contact with were quite co-operative and the demonstrators handled themselves very well," said the chief.

"The students were successful in their one hour of blocking the border, and everyone went home happy."

Uvic student council president Norm Wright, who crossed to shake Gregory's hand as the demonstration broke up, said police co-operation was enlightened, useful and worthy of respect.

"They were ideal policemen," he said. "You got the feeling they were really there to help rather than hinder."

As students sang, laughed and cheered in the terminal exit, police eased the first of 10 cars off the ferry through the crowd. They all bore Canadian licence plates.

But after one frustrated driver gunned his engine in the middle of a crowd, banging the legs of some students, Gregory stepped in and asked the remaining cars on the dock to wait.

The drivers took it in good humor. When they finally came up past remaining protesters after the one-hour blockade was lifted, some even returned youngsters' peace signs with enthusiasm.

One long-haired student emphatically reiterated that police were "groovy, simply groovy."

"I never would have believed it," he said. "It goes to show you can get a better education at one of these things than a hundred political science lectures."

Black Ball Ferries Victoria manager Pat Frumento said he was not overly upset by the demonstration. He said it was the students' right and that they did not trespass on company property.

CO-OPERATIVE

"Those who did stray on were most co-operative and left immediately when asked," he said.

"A really good thing has happened," said Wright after the protest, "we debated a social and political issue with good humor and there was virtually no animosity."

One incident did threaten to flare into violence, but both Wright and Gregory attributed it to members of a local motorcycle club and not students.

When a car became surrounded by students, several people began pounding on the hood and one man broke his picket stick over the fender.

At that point police took his name and other students moved the agitators out of the area without further incident.

"I hate those —— that want blood, that want a victim every time so long as it's someone else," said Wright.

"They were not with us.

"People who operate on the smell of blood—whether they wave A-bombs or the Sayings of Mao: we don't need them. Carrying a peace sign and yelling for murder is really great stuff."

OUTSIDERS

Gregory also emphasized the trouble-makers were not university students.

"The students were well-behaved and well-mannered," said the chief, "that was not their style."

Wright was enthusiastic over the success of the protest.

"I think it is significant that we got 2,500 people into an area with not enough breathing space and did not have a freak-out.

"We've had the red-neck over there," he pointed to the Legislative Buildings in reference to Attorney-General Leslie Peterson's tough statements Tuesday, "and the goon-squad here," he pointed to a few remaining motorcyclists.

"We handled them both—and with the police's help."

U.S. Test Fails Poster Gradings

Victoria students displayed biting humor Wednesday in their sign language protest against the Amchitka nuclear test.

"Border closed due to blasting" probably was the most common picket poster seen during the demonstrations at the Causeway and airport.

"Is this any way to treat a colony?" was the home-lettered question of at least one youth.

A girl waved a banner punning on the title of a recent movie title with "Amchitka, chitka, ban, bang."

Other poster puns were in evidence:

"As ye sow, so shall you rape."

"Have a blast in Canada, Dick."

"But I don't like mushrooms."

"Death is not a human way of life."

And, accompanying a crudely-drawn fish skeleton, "Gone fission."

Other eye-catchers among the scores of more prosaic protests were "What have sea otters done to you, Nixon?" "Amchitka is for birds, not bombs," "Crapped crabs taste bad," "Opening soon—San Andreas fault," "Move the White House to Amchitka," "Happiness is a warm bomb" and "Would you let Nixon play in your back yard?"

And, sprinkled everywhere among the youths, were signs that asked simply: "Why?"

Priest Leads Youth Protest Against Test

PORT ALBERNI — Teenage demonstrators, led by a young Roman Catholic priest, marched on the city hall here Wednesday to protest the American nuclear test today in the Aleutian Islands.

Father Mark LeMay of Notre Dame Church, speaking for the 200 youngsters, said they had a different idea of peace than the advocates of the bomb test.

The marchers were met at city hall by Alderman George McKnight who accepted a petition from the students and said he would take it to council and ask that it be forwarded to the U.S.

Port Alberni was hit by a tidal wave following an earthquake in Alaska in 1964. Emergency instructions have been issued in case today's test triggers another wave.

"relaxation makes for a long life span"

RELAXATION is a necessary ingredient for success in everything having to do with human life. One of the secrets of creating a happy household is the ability to provide an environment where care and frustration are so abated that home becomes a restful retreat. The loving care that goes into furnishing a home is an important intangible that helps make this so. Let your intuition guide you in finding a salesperson or interior designer who possesses the ability to recognize this.

ELEGANCE . . . a synonym for Autumn. The richness and refinement that nature lavishly spreads across the countryside at this time of year clothes fields and forests with an elegance unapproached by any other season. For nature is an exterior designer who molds and mixes colour in a manner that is the despair and envy of all who aspire to worth and merit in interior design and decoration. This Fall all indications pointed to a continued interest in the use of bold, almost brash colour. But there is a tendency toward mellowing that suggests the elegance of old-world propriety. You'll want to make the most of it by asking for our fine salesmen and interior design staff.

The Tradition Continues

EMERGENCE OF ST. JOSEPH'S General Hospital this week as a regional hospital marks the end of private management by the Sisters of St. Ann after 94 years of devoted service to this community. The growth of the regional concept, as well as the magnitude and complexity of hospital planning and financing today, no doubt were factors in the decision of the Order to prepare the way for a public institution. But the nursing sisters fortunately will continue their work of healing in the hospital, and the Order will be represented on the new board of directors.

Very challenging problems await the new directors. The institution must be greatly enlarged, with a possibly new role for the existing building if plans for the projected acute care hospital take shape on the grounds of St. Ann's Academy. The extended care hospital on Burdett Street will also undergo replacement if the recommendations of the Agnew-Peckham advisers are followed.

It appears that in the new St. Joseph's and the Royal Jubilee, this community will continue to be well served, but extensions in the acute field are urgently needed in view of the long waiting lists of would-be patients. That means financial investment, and a hospital referendum of as much as $50 millions is being prepared for submission to the voters next spring.

This time, the voters will act as residents of the region rather than of the city or municipalities, and it is essential, despite the large sums involved, that the project be put into action. The authorities in charge should make sure that the public is fully educated in regard to the need for hospital accommodation, and the consequent duty to shoulder at least part of the burden of paying for it. In a period when avoidable spending should be curtailed, there are two types of construction projects which should have high priority. One is schools and the other is hospitals. They should be built with such economy as is possible without sacrificing efficiency and the visual attraction that should accompany major additions to our environment.

No considerations of politics should be permitted to interfere with the hospital-building program which is now taking shape for both acute and other types of accomodation. A building referendum was defeated here several years ago, apparently by a concerted move among voters to teach the provincial government a lesson. It was a mistaken objective and a mishandled means; we have felt ever since the lack of the hospital beds that should have been provided at that time.

Now, under the regional concept, we can not afford another such setback. It is not too early to begin the job of informing the public on the need and its responsibility to meet that need. There will be many other important and essential demands on the public purse in the days ahead. This is one that cannot be set aside.

The Medium Is the Message

YESTERDAY'S ANTI-NUCLEAR noon-hour demonstration at the Inner Harbor was apparently carried out with a high degree of order and restraint, and may have done much to create a better understanding between police and university students. Granted that the undertaking was not likely to sway Washington in its determination to stage an underground nuclear test in the Aleutians, it served as an expression of student opinion and no doubt was viewed sympathetically by many other persons in the city.

The point, however, is that such a demonstration can be managed without violence if the organizers are properly prepared and the participants are of a reasonable frame of mind, as Victoria students traditionally have been. The minor departure from non-violence was allegedly caused by non-students who had appeared uninvited at the scene. But student leaders should have found a lesson in the temporary disturbance. That is, that events can easily get away from the arranged script once a large crowd has been assembled, and while the university members may remain under control, there is no guarantee that others who take advantage of the excitement may not set the whole proceedings off on a wrong track.

The demonstration, designed to "close the U.S.-Canadian border" in a token one-hour protest across the country, was largely confined to placard-waving and impressing anti-bomb sentiments on the entering United States travellers. Insofar as this was the case there can be little criticism. But where drivers and their passengers were deliberately delayed by mob pressure — and who can say what serious effects this may have had on individuals—this was resort to the very tactics against which the demonstrators were protesting. For one of the main complaints was the action of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission in proceeding with the test despite the opposition of many persons on this continent and abroad: the same principle of "we'll do what we want regardless of you" which in some cases forced travellers to sit on wharves or at Customs points for an hour — and all of them powerless to do anything to meet the protesters' wishes even had they wanted to.

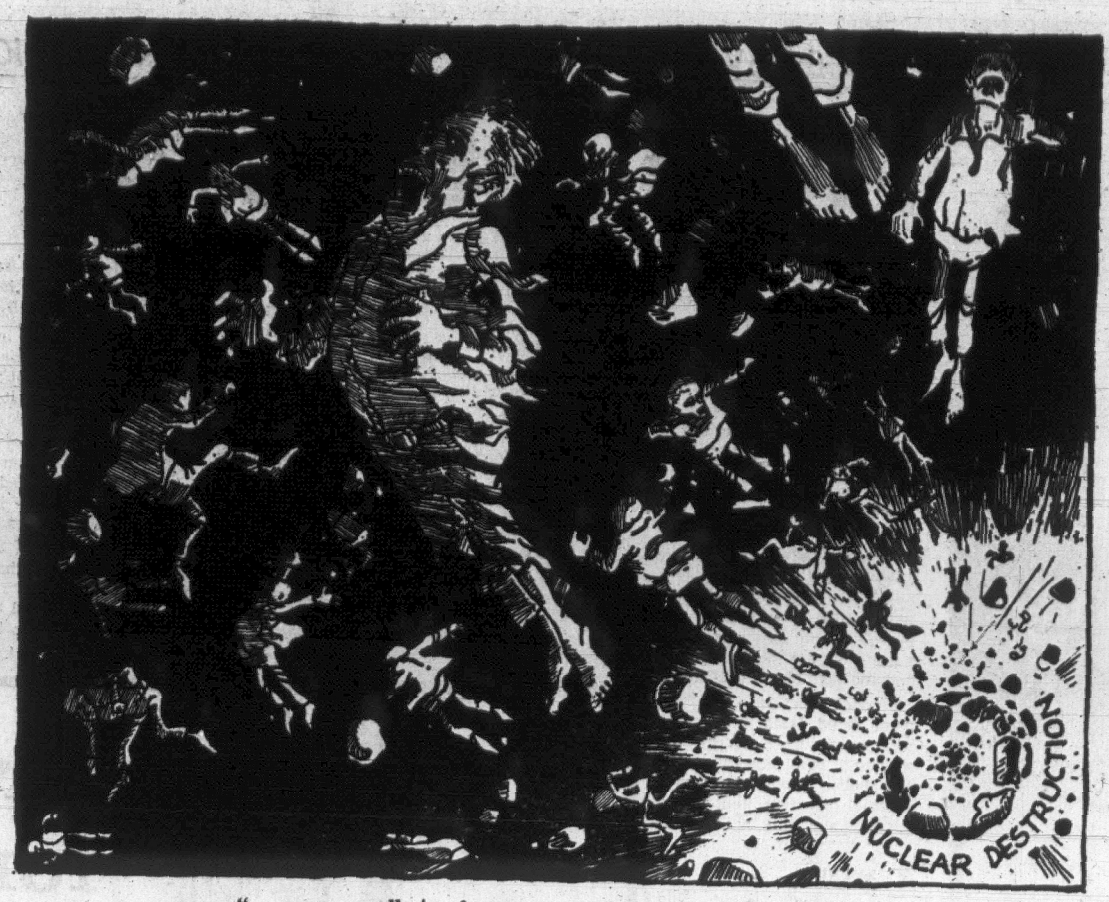

A mass protest is acceptable, the mode of the day. But the target should be clearly identified and the weapon truly aimed. If, as one participant observed, the outing was worth a hundred political science lectures, well and good — as long as the right lessons were learned.

As They Say in Swahili . . .

IN CANADA DISCUSSIONS still continue on the bilingual issue, meaning the acceptance of English and French as legal languages. In Scotland, Ireland and Wales the question of tongues takes different forms. There the division is between nationalists who want to maintain their native languages and those who prefer to accept English. This, it appears, is the trend of a growing number of Kenya's citizens. They want Swahili and they would be happy enough to make the official language that and that alone, letting English, currently the official speech, languish if it must.

President Jomo Kenyatta has announced relaxation of the rule which calls for English debates in parliament and foresees the day when Swahili may well replace English altogether.

Perhaps this is an expression of feeling for country, not only in Kenya. But if English disappears in states where it is now in general use, how will English-speaking people communicate in international fields? How, indeed, will they talk to each other, considering what is being done to the language today?

". . . . one small step for man, one giant leap for mankind . . ."

FROM UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. — By WILLIAM R. FRYE

Easing Open the ECM Door

PROSPECTS of expanding the European Common Market to include not only Britain but Ireland, Denmark, Norway and (as an associate member) Austria have brightened in recent weeks. UN people now are betting at least 2-1 that it will come off.

Frye

Reasons for the optimism boil down to two:

1. France's five partners in the Common Market — The Netherlands, Belgium, Luxembourg, Italy and West Germany — are prepared to insist on "expansion" as the price for "achievement" of the market on January 1, 1970 and for its "development" into the basis for stronger intra-European political ties.

2. The Soviet Union has quietly modified or withdrawn earlier objections to association of Austria with the market. Under the World War II peace treaty, Austria is a contractual neutral, requiring a Soviet okay for any association with the West.

Italy has also eased the obstacles it previously had raised to Austria's application. Rome had blamed Vienna for its difficulties in the Alto Adige (former Austrian Tyrol).

Meanwhile, an economic "arrangement" between the Common Market and Egypt as well as with Lebanon has been endorsed in principle, along with a similar opening for Israel, whose application has been pending three years.

Major Boost

Britain's chances are due to get a major new boost October 2 in a report to the Market by Jean Max Georges Rey, president of its executive commission. Market sources say it will open up "real possibilities" for speedy negotiations with London.

France's five partners in the Common Market still fear French heel-dragging, but are in no mood for delay.

If the Six-power summit meeting scheduled for November 17-18 in The Hague does not at the very least set a date for the opening of negotiations with Britain, a "very severe crisis will develop in the Common Market," Dutch Foreign Minister Joseph Luns said in an interview here.

Although there is no "legal link" between "enlargement" of the Market, on the one hand, and its "achievement" and "development" on the other, there is in fact "a certain parallelism" between them, and therefore a "political link," Luns said.

"Achievement" of the Market would involve major concessions to French agriculture, which is inefficient, out of date, and in need of subsidies. In effect, Luns was hinting that these concessions may be withheld if there is any French heel-dragging on Britain's admission.

Post-De Gaulle France has taken a more flexible view on enlargement of the Market than the general did when in power. Schumann told the UN General Assembly September 24 enlargement was "eminently desirable."

But Schumann made clear he wanted French agriculture proteeted first. When that is safely completed with no resulting "weakening" of the Market, the six can turn to the applications from Britain and others, he is known to feel.

This order of events disturbs others of the six. They found this part of his UN speech disappointing.

Luns, who is dean of Western foreign ministers, having been in office continuously since 1952, is currently president of the Market. The Netherlands has been one of the strongest and most consistent advocates of Britain's entry.

Luns and West German Foreign Minister Willy Brandt had an unpublicized lunch with British Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart September 22.

Stewart "emphasized very strongly," Luns said, that the British application for membership was irrevocable. Later the Briton made this point in talks with Schumann also.

Intentions Questioned

There had been some question about Britain's intentions in the light of public opinion polls in Britain showing majorities against entry.

Luns plans to raise the question of Austria's association at an early meeting. Russia's earlier "outspoken hostility" to the move has "abated," he said, with obvious satisfaction.

"I feel confident Moscow will not object as long as Austria does not conclude agreements which forge institutional links with the Market. The Soviet Union would agree to Austria having a preferential trade agreement."

Moscow's approval is required because of the terms of the Austrian state treaty ending World War II.

FROM REGINA — By JAMES H. GRAY

Wheat Piles Up While the Mice Grow Fat

THE side effects of growing another unmarketable 700,000,000-bushel wheat crop with most of last year's crop unsold are beginning to appear on the prairies. One very obvious sign is the minor boom in plywood sales. Most of the permanent-grain storage was already well filled on the farms before the 1969 harvest started. So there is no place to store the new crop except in the open farm yards. After several years of trial and error the farmers have now reduced outdoor grain storage to routine. All they need is a couple of hundred dollars for plywood.

Gray

Sixteen sheets of 4x8 plywood stood on the long edge will make a 20 foot circle into which 2,000 bushels of wheat can be piled. A sheet of pliofilm is usually used as ground cover and several sheets cover the top. The latter are then held in place by covering with bales of straw. This provides a fairly weather proof and mouse proof storage bin for less than 5 cents a bushel.

The less well-heeled dispense with the plastic top and bottom. The poorest off substitute bales of straws piled in a circle for the plywood. Whatever the system, the commonest sight in the west this fall is the conical piles of frozen asset wheat in the farm yards.

An increasingly common sight is the rapidly growing field mouse population. In many areas, migrating mice catch the headlights of highway traffic as they move at night from field to field. They will make an awful mess of much of the field stored grain this winter if they get into residence under it.

Sales Drop

A more sinister side effect is the impending disaster for the farm implement dealers who are entangled in their exclusive franchise contracts when the demand is drying up. There are 560 such dealers in Saskatchewan. They expect the number to drop by as much as 50 per cent in the next year. Their sales dropped 15 per cent in 1966 and 25 per cent a year in the next two years. A further drop of 25 per cent is indicated for this year.

So the Saskatchewan Implement Dealers Association has hired an economist to pressure the Government into legislative action to rescue the dealers from bankruptcy. They want most to get some escape clauses forcibly inserted in their contracts.

The dealers claim that the contracts, drawn by the manufacturers' lawyers, give the latter all the breaks. Thus they can neither get out of business except at a great loss, or stay in with debt-ridden customers. The companies will not take back inventories forced on the dealers. And they hold the dealers responsible for unpaid balances on notes.

The most crushing blow to the dealers however is interest piling up on unsold equipment. With short term money rates running at 16 per cent, these charges can eat up all the dealers' profits if they have to carry stock over from one crop to the next.

Overloaded

Even a cursory examination of the wheat country town indicates that the west is overloaded with machinery dealers who are overloaded with equipment of all kinds. In many of the farm towns, all the main makers are represented by exclusive franchise dealers. Very often, the market could probably support a couple of dealers where there are half a dozen.

In many cases the dealers co-operated with the no-down-payment, pay-when-the-crop-is-off advertising gimmickry used by the makers to beef up the slack seasons. The tractors and combines sold with such enthusiasm last winter are now haunting everybody concerned. The farmers can't pay. Niether can the dealers, a fact that seems to have taken the company credit managers completely by surprise.

With the squeeze coming on, the dealers have now turned to the government for help. They want some debt adjustment machinery similar to that devised during the 1930's. For example, they want a law postponing without penalty the purchase price of unsold equipment.

They want the fine print in their contracts amended. If a company cancels a contract on short notice it should be forced to take back all the unsold equipment on the dealers' hands. They want exclusiveness ended and a right to buy machinery from other companies.

Through the Wringer

What they want and what they are likely to get may be poles apart. So far they have had a sympathetic hearing. The Saskatchewan Government, thinking out loud for the benefit of all concerned, has said it would be happy to see the makers and dealers find some mutually satisfactory solution to the interest and debt problem. It is most reluctant to impose a settlement of a dispute between two free enterprising interests, even if it has the power. Right now it doesn't think it does have the legislative muscle needed to solve this problem. So the chances are a lot of implement dealers will go through the wringer before the new crop is converted into cash.

Looking Back

From the Times of Oct. 2, 1909:

The B.C. Electric Railway Co. Ltd. has secured no less a sum than $2,500,000 in fresh capital towards its comprehensive scheme for increasing its transportation facilities in this province. While much of this huge sum will no doubt be required to meet the cost of new branch lines on the mainland, ample capital will be available for enlargements to the system in Victoria. Earnings of the company are up 17 per cent on last year.

Thanks for Giving

Thanksgiving Day is approaching — a very suitable occasion for Goodwill Enterprises for the Handicapped to voice a sincere "Thanks for Giving" to your readers.

Day in and day out throughout the year, the people of Greater Victoria and district have supported Goodwill in the quiet, undramatic way that has become such a heart-warming feature of Vancouver Island life.

Without fuss, claiming no halos, thousands of your readers regularly make that trip to one of our familiar deposit booths — or call for a Goodwill pickup truck — in order to "give it to Goodwill."

In doing so, they answer the only appeal Goodwill Enterprises makes. Their individual donations of usable, unwanted clothing and other household articles join others, to become a steady stream of material flowing into Goodwill all year long.

As a result, Goodwill Enterprises is able to offer the handicapped people of Vancouver Island a constantly widening range of work-training and rehabilitation services. Many visitors from all over Canada tell us again and again that our services here are the best and most advanced to be found anywhere across this nation.

This doesn't make us complacent. There is much we would like to do better; many new services we would like to offer. Yet here at Goodwill we do try to live up to our responsibility for offering the Island's handicapped a pathway to self-supporting dignity, pride and social usefulness.

All that we achieve in meeting that responsibility is due to the steady generosity of your readers and other Vancouver Islanders. May I ask them to accept this "Thanks for Giving" message as a warm expression of appreciation from Goodwill Enterprises and the many handicapped Islanders we help? — Robert W. Dudley, Manager and Director of Rehabilitation.

Why Weren't They Invited

Why did we not ask our neighbors across the border to show their confidence in their product by transporting the Nixon family, and the families of the entire AEC to the West Coast for a short stay. I am sure the people of Tofino, Port Alberni, Alaska and so on would have been very glad to accommodate them — L. Faulkner, 3422 Calumet.

Lost Sport

Ottawa Journal

Armed with computers and complicated scoring sheets, the statistic gremlins have invaded the tennis world. At the recent National Open in Forest Hills, N.Y., an army of youthful scorers fed shot-by-shot accounts of each match into two large computers. The result was instant analyses of each player at the tournament, in terms of esoteric information such as unreturned serves, the percentage of deuce games played, love games won, and first serves in. Add that to the TV coverage with its slow-motion-stop-action-instant-replay-on-isolated-Camera and they've done the analysis bit to death.

There'll always be a promoter and a gimmick man in show biz and sport — and when they combine on TV the gadgeteers must show how desperately clever they are so that though the medium may be the message it is certainly no longer sport. A drag-out foursome in someone's back yard or the local area club, with a droopy net and tattered tapes or washed-out line-marks, was a lot more fun.

St. Leonard the Testing Ground For a 'Viable, Bilingual Canada'

By MAXWELL COHEN

It is one of the ironies of the many-level Canadian debate, from French-speaking survival to all-Canada survival, that confidence in the positive resolution of these challenges should now be rooted in the crisis over St. Leonard.

For if the spectacle of language and school rights denied in St. Leonard, and its possible repetition elsewhere in Quebec, is allowed to become a festering pattern, then the prospects for Canadian federalism themselves may be profoundly damaged before our very view.

The relationship between the general Canadian dilemma and language-school rights in Quebec is by now self-evident. What was not appreciated until recently was the lack of understanding on the part of many French-speaking leaders among the moderates—forget the extremists, here—that they cannot sit on this fence of indecision, waiting for luck or a unique formula, or the direction of the wind, to invite the way they should fall.

Sudden Reversion to Fear

What is disheartening is that after eight or nine years of a powerful English-speaking movement, at every intellectual and opinion-making level in Canada, to accept and to force the pace of achieving a truly bilingual federalism in action from coast to coast, there should be this sudden reversion to a closed-in fear which threatens the edifice being built of the new Canada on wisdom, moderation and courage.

It is very difficult for English-speaking Canadians in Quebec to be utterly frank and yet display the profound empathy they are developing for the essentials of the French-speaking position on the great issues of the Canadian future.

For on the one side the old English-speaking economic ascendency is politically dead however significant that ascendency in pure managerial terms yet may be in part of the Quebec economy.

For generations the "ascendency" lived by a kind of implicit "deal-making" with the French-speaking majority, through its traditional parties and leaders, and the classical positions of each remained on the whole protected from the evident numerical majority of French-speaking and from excessive Anglo-Canadian economic abuse on the other.

Both Mr. Duplessis and then the Quiet Revolution (owing almost as many debts to Father Levesque and even Paul Sauve as it did to Jean Lesage and his time) were profoundly concerned with French-speaking survival.

Update French-Speaking Life

The great difference between them was that "a revolution tranquille" had something more creative in mind than simple ethnic defence: it would modernize and update the whole of French-speaking life which in artistic and literary terms, and to some extent in the social sciences, had already begun to show the dynamism of its potential talent well before 1960.

The dilemma that soon confronted theorists of French-speaking life in Quebec —was how to be both utterly modern and utterly French-speaking—in an utterly North American setting. For the logic of joining the full rush of twentieth century American technology and affluence inevitably would mean becoming more North American, not less, for the language and culture of North America, above the Rio Grande, was English-American, not French.

Thus the old dilemma of survival became converted, in the midst of progressive and rapid change in Quebec, into the new dilemma of survival "with fulfillment and achievement." But it was soon recognized that the price of such a competitive and successful joining of the North American main stream was a greater involvement with its culture, its language and its technology and this could well be a new threat more profoundly disturbing than the old one.

For at least the old danger to survival had the ally of comfortable history and a moat of entrenched institutions to surround the French-speaking island amid an engulfing dynamic Anglo-American world.

It is this new debate that is fundamental to the St. Leonard issue and one for which English-speaking Canadians everywhere must have sympathy and understanding, and it is this debate which must be resolved basically by French-speaking Canadians themselves within the context of mid-twentieth century ideas of human rights and the new bilingual Canada, not nineteenth century concepts of the village, the church and the seige.

Hence the great difficulty for the English-speaking Canadian, particularly in Quebec, but elsewhere in Canada, too. He cannot be unaware, if he is human, of the distress and the true anxieties within French-speaking Quebec life and leadership.

But he cannot be so sympathetic as to blind himself to the possibility that among the options now being considered by some French-speaking leaders and their followers is the diminution of English-language legal and historical claims in Quebec and the hope to preserve French-speaking community life by a suppression of any undue vigour in the English-speaking sector of Quebec life amid new Canadians and old.

Tragically, this is a price that neither English-speaking Quebec nor all of Canada and should be asked to pay. For if insecurity pervades the English-speaking Canadian's future in Quebec, at a moment when almost all have accepted the need for a vigorous, bilingual and bicultural Canada, and particularly in Quebec, then how shall any security on these issues be established in the more cautious, distant and heavily "majority-minded" English-speaking Canadians in the other provinces, and perhaps even in New Brunswick where bilingualism, as an official policy for all, is now well on its way.

It is one of the tragedies too, that when Mr. Trudeau, with great skill, saw that the injustices of yesteryear, in the matter of language rights in other provinces, had quickly to be rectified if Canada was to survive with Quebec within it, that at such a moment of rising and positive Canadian convictions on this issue, Quebec leadership, moderates — to say nothing of extremists — and others, should begin to hold back.

To question the constitutional and legal claims of new Canadians or old ones to chose English as a teaching and working language for their lives, side by side with French in the Province of Quebec, is to question the very viability of a truly bilingual Quebec and thus, even more so, the viability of a new Canada itself.

An Extreme Interpretation

Let there be no mistake about it: constitutional and legal arguments can be put forward that English-language school rights are protected only at the denominational level — although pre-Confederation legislation in Lower Canada (1861) and the 1964 Education Act amendments do suggest the concept of English as a teaching language almost over and above the narrower denominational position.

Certainly, the preamble to the 1964 amendments does not seem to have contemplated the making of language-rights policy for schools at the local school commission level alone.

The theory that the long line of statutes, pre-Confederation and post, together with Section 93 of the British North America Act, binds the hands of the provincial government so that it cannot command local school commissions to behave in a manner consistent with "accepted and practiced" rights of having English-speaking instruction for Catholic children, is an extreme interpretation of both the constitutional and statutory provisions, however narrowly powerful the legal argument can be put.

Aside altogether from the legal issues, in this limited sense, the new constitutional debate about Quebec and Canada as a whole surely never assumed that we should emerge with a diminution of rights when the essential foundations for the dialogue had been an enlargement of human claims upon each other and our respective language communities.

And ironically, too, never was French-speaking life and culture more vital and promising from the arts to commerce, from language to science, than it is today.

There Is No Alternative

There is no alternative for French and English-speaking leadership alike but to accept in full measure the bilingual future of Quebec and of Canada, federally and provincially — as worked out more or less in the B. and B. recommendations — and to entrench such policy in the form of inviolable constitutional rights.

It is no use French-speaking moderates asking English-speaking neighbors to trust temporary political leadership any more than French-speaking Canadians should be in the hands of bigots or friends elsewhere in Canada.

We all must live in the security of a common framework for the future that does not demand the sacrifice of one integrity in order to advance or protect the claims of another.

St. Leonard (and its analogues) is the testing ground as to whether an authentically bicultural life is possible in Quebec and therefore it has become an ironic and tragic test, too, for the future of a viable, bilingual Canada.

Learn to Love Your Teen-Ager And Get a New Lease on Life

By NICHOLAS VON HOFFMAN

In an effort to establish a cease-fire in the American family, this space is being given over to a guest columnist, Dr. Ahem Genung. Dr. Genung has a national reputation, having appeared on the Today Show, the Tonight Show, the Merv Griffin Show, the Joey Bishop Show and the Dick Clark Show. For the last three years Dr. Genung has been one of the country's top-selling child psychologists. He is the recipient of the 1968 Golden Book Award. He is serialized in 800 American newspapers and has been the subject of two essays in Time Magazine. Dr. Genung is also a Columbia recording artist.

An understanding parent has no reason to fear death at the hands of his child. To experience the fear is normal. To give in to it is a mistake.

Parents forget their teen-agers are very sensitive. An adolescent boy can tell if his father fears patricide. He will sense the rejection that goes along with such fears. Then he may act in some way the father disapproves of.

Many parents want to know how to talk to their teen-agers. Being intelligent people they want to communicate with the young members of their family.

●

A parent should not reproach himself for such feelings. He must remember his teen-age child also has feelings. I tell parents who come to me with the problem to wait until they're spoken to by the children and then talk up freely. It is never wise to speak first. The teen-age years are turbulent and difficult. The unexpected voices of older people may alarm your teen-ager.

Parents are often concerned about what teen-agers do outside the home.

Louise, 15, told her mother she'd robbed a bank.

Mother: Were your friends with you?

Louise: You don't care about what I do. You're only interested in the impression I make on others.

●

Louise was right. A teen-ager feels that she leads a unique, special life. In this case Louise's mother failed to understand how important this was to her daughter. In another case when the daughter confided a similar adolescent confidence, the mother quickly said to the daughter: "Oh, you are a good person." The daughter answered by stabbing the mother.

What was the mother's mistake? The mother was acting like a judge. She said: "You are a good person." Teen-agers do not like to be judged. For them praise can be as destructive as criticism.

A wiser parent might say: "Oh, you robbed a bank. Did you get any money?" This shows interest in what the young person is doing. Had the parent asked: "Did you kill anybody?" that would be prying.

Asking if the daughter got any money was a good answer for three reasons. (1) It showed interest; (2) It moved toward a situation where praise was possible; (3) It saved the mother's life.

A group of mothers deeply worried about their teen-agers met to discuss a common concern. The subject was cannibalism. The discussion illustrates how differently six persons from one community feel about this troublesome issue:

●

Mrs. Z: I come from a strict, religious background. My parents would have thought such a thing sinful.

Mrs. T: Whenever my teen-ager brings up the subject all I can do is blush and stutter. I can't bring myself to talk about it.

Mrs. E: Its attraction has always been a puzzle to me. I think it's disgusting.

Mrs. B: My daughter's only 14. I think she's a little young for it, but if she does it at her age I hope she knows the difference between an idle, curious appetite and hunger.

Mrs. M: We haven't been able to find a trace of my mother-in-law.

Mrs. H: What are young people today going to do? They can't vote. Our children live in a different world than the one we grew up in.

This discussion reflects a deep conflict in values. Some parents are ready to accept it and others aren't. Teen-agers are puzzled, too. They see a society that stimulates desire but which says no. In the movies and in daily life taboos are being requestioned. That is the way it is with us right now. College girls find it very hard to hold the line. The subject is a matter of deep concern.

Teen-agers have sensing mechanisms that locate even the smallest things which might aggravate parents. Arthur, 13, intuitively doped out that his father hated heroin and that his mother would get wildly angry if he didn't take a bath for two months. Arthur became a dirty junkie.

●

Arthur's mother said: "You're a bummer."

Arthur's father said: "You're a filthy, strung out smack freak."

Effective parents would not talk this way. Good criticism is constructive. Attacks on personality and character make a teen-ager feel badly about himself.

This may cause resentment which will cause guilt which causes more hostility. Arthur will cut up again. The circle will be repeated until Arthur dies of an overdose.

Arthur looks at things differently: "My parents do not understand my torments. They do not see I have a loose personality and a need to live life deeply. They are not effective parents."

●

Arthur's case ended happily because his parents understood it was not too late to change their tactics. Arthur's mother stopped talking about how bad he smelled. She used the power of example. Every day she took a big tub into Arthur's room and bathed the family dog. After several weeks Arthur told her: "I will bathe the family dog."

Arthur's father saw that he must not criticize but guide. He saw that his criticism must be directed to problem solving. He did not make the mistake of trying to be a pal to his son. A boy wants a father, not a 40-year-old buddy.

●

Arthur's father did not take heroin. He explained to his son that methadone is cheaper. Arthur no longer shoots H when his father is around. Arthur is also reporting regularly to his shrink and his parole officer.

Learning how to understand your teen-ager and manipulate him is an interpersonal skill a successful parent needs. However, there are no pat formulas or tricks. Nothing replaces love and honesty. Keep that in mind and your children will not kill you. They will go away and leave you alone.

The Brittle Star Looks All Wrong

By DR. CLIFFORD CARL
Director, Provincial Museum

Most persons would probably recognize a serpent star or brittle star as some kind of a starfish since it has the traditional shape incorporating five arms. However several important differences will be noted between a brittle star and other kinds of starfish.

Most striking is the fact that in a brittle star the central disk and the five arms are distinctly marked off from each other. The disk which encloses all the vital organs of the body is also markedly small in proportion to the rest of the animal and the arms or rays are remarkably thin and long.

The result is that a brittle star is almost a grotesque caricature of a conventional starfish—one with a too-small body to which spindly arms are attached as an afterthought.

There are also other important differences between the two kinds of starfishes that come to notice with closer examination. The tube feet that are a conspicuous feature of the better known starfish are very much reduced in brittle stars and function as sense organs, or gills instead of organs of locomotion.

★ ★ ★

Instead of being located in a special groove on the under surface of each arm as they are in the common purple star the tube feet in brittle stars are scattered and usually lack suckers.

Another unusual feature is the presence of a series of five groups of movable plates around the mouth which serve as jaws and an equal number of sac-like cavities within the disk which function as combined brood chambers and respiratory organs.

The cavities open to the outside through slits on either side of the base of each of the five arms. Water passes in and out through the slits during respiratory movements and young are released through the same openings.

A most striking difference is in behavior. Instead of creeping over the bottom as does the common purple star, most brittle stars push themselves along by rowing motions of the arms or pull themselves forward by using the arms as grasping organs. One species before reaching full size can swim by extending one arm ahead, trailing two behind and using the remaining two as wings or fins.

★ ★ ★

As a group brittle stars that live in shallow water are retiring by nature. By day they hide beneath rocks or seaweed so they are seldom seen in the open.

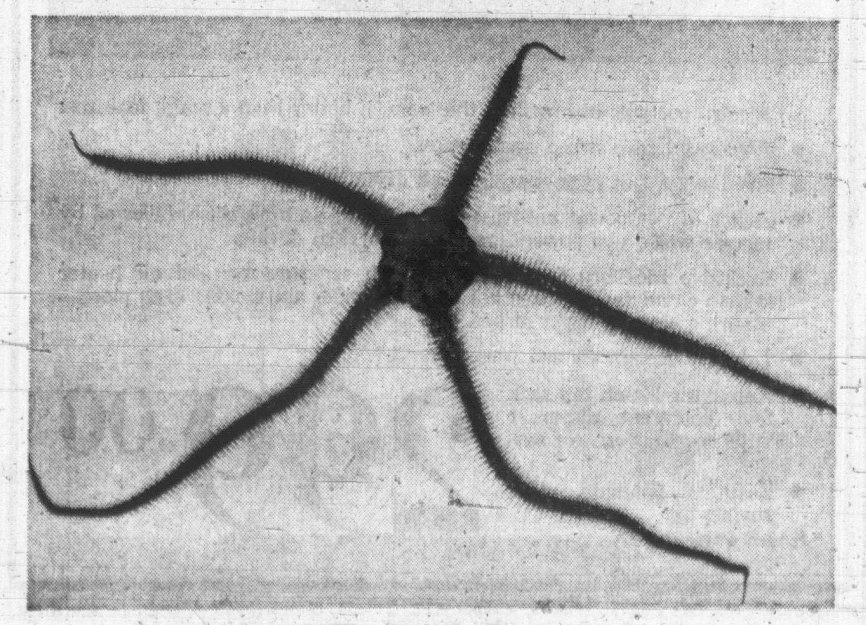

Some spend their life buried in mud or sand with only the tips of some of the arms extending to the surface to obtain food and oxygen. Many kinds are found in very deep water where there may be little or no light to regulate their periods of activity.

Food is mostly detritus —bits of animal or plant material that settle on the bottom—or small dead animals or pieces of larger ones. The food items are taken directly into the mouth or are picked up by the tip of an arm to be passed along by the tube feet toward the mouth.

★ ★ ★

The arms of most brittle stars are extremely fragile. They are frequently thrown off or broken off so that one seldom finds a complete specimen; usually one or more arm tips are missing at least.

However, the power of regeneration is highly developed. Even if a brittle star is cut in half each part can grow into a complete animal, an unusual ability that is shared by most members of this remarkable group of marine creatures.

Ifs Abound in Cape Mudge Situation

By REG SILVESTER

Members of the Cape Mudge band on Quadra Island off Campbell River may be the first Indians in British Columbia to adopt a municipal form of government.

But there are a lot of questions hanging open that make "may" a key word.

●

If the Indian Affairs Branch in Ottawa gives assurance that band members will not lose any federal grants, the band council will begin an information program in hopes of holding a plebiscite before the end of the year.

If the plebiscite gets 75 per cent approval, an aplication will be made to the federal cabinet to allow Cape Mudge to become a village municipality.

If the cabinet agrees, the provincial government can then act on legislation it passed last session allowing Indian reserves to incorporate as municipalities.

Chief of the Cape Mudge band, Lawrence Lewis, said a letter was sent to the Indian Affairs office in Ottawa three weeks ago.

Barry Goodwin, local services officer at the Vancouver Indian Affairs office, said he hopes a reply to that letter will come within a week.

"We've been pushing this one."

He said the situation has greater importance in view of Indian Affairs Minister Chretien's policy paper, which would transfer responsibility for the native people to the provinces.

But he said discussions at Cape Mudge have gone on for two years, and the result will be the same whether or not the policy is implemented.

Chief Lewis doesn't think the Indian Act will change, considering the uproar that has come from bands across the country.

●

However, he and his council favor incorporation.

"We'll be able to opt out at any time and resume things as they are now. I don't know what we can lose," Lesis said.

G. E. Whelen of the municipal affairs department explained that a change would not affect any basic Indian right, but would allow them to receive such provincial benefits as the homeowner grant and a $28 per capita grant to the municipal council.

The department has indicated it is willing to bend its rules as much as possible to accommodate the Indians.

For example, Whelen said, there may be a special provision to allow protection of the trust holding of lands. If land must be sold for taxes, only another band member would be eligible to purchase it.

The Cape Mudge reserve has about 250 inhabitants whose main source of income is fishing. Their per capital income is high in comparison to other Indians in the region, and their number on welfare is low.

All that may change with the poor fishing season this year, said Lewis, a fisherman himself, who rates this year "poor in comparisin even to the poorest."

●

Lewis said after the change there would probably be both a reeve and chief; municipal and band councils, although both would probably have the same membership.

One council would look after municipal affairs, and the other would be concerned with band affairs, relations with Ottawa and land leases.

Canyon Chosen For CBC Show On Logging

DUNCAN — The Canadian Broadcasting Corporation moved $80,000 worth of portable equipment into Copper Canyon this week to take pictures of trees.

The tapes will be used to illustrate the complexities of economics and particularly the workings of Canada's logging industry.

The show, Unseen Connections, will consist of four programs aimed at Grade 6, 7 and 8 students to be shown in April.

The difficulty says script writer Jim McLean is illustrating a subject as complex as Canadian industry, so that youngsters can understand.

Inter-relationships among loggers, foresters and paper industry artists will be used as a model for the inter-relationships in a logging operation.

Hunter Training Offered at Lake

LAKE COWICHAN — Courses in hunter training and the generation gap are being offered at two different schools here this month.

At Lake Cowichan Senior Secondary a course covering use of firearms, safety techniques, big game, and survival in the woods starts Oct. 27. There will be separate classes for adults and students.

Dorothy Code, director of adult education at Lake Cowichan School, said the course may soon become mandatory for hunters applying to the department of wildlife for licences.

"Parents are strongly advised to consider this course if they expect to permit their children to hunt."

It costs $5 and instructors are Louie Biczo, a teacher at Lake Cowichan, and millworker Frazer Webster.

The generation gap will be discussed in communications workshops for adults and children at the Gestalt Institute this weekend and again Oct. 17 and 18.

The institute is privately owned and was started here in June.

"The workshops are designed to promote improvement in normal family living," said Mrs. Code.

"Members participate in a series of exercises designed to promote communication. There are no lectures."

Each workshop accommodates 20 persons.

Bonn Coalition Talks Allocate Cabinet Jobs

BONN (CP) — Only "loose strings" remain to be tied before the Social Democrats and Free Democrats agree to form a coalition government in West Germany, a spokesman for the negotiating parties said today.

The spokesman, Heinz Kuehn of the Social Democrats' presidium, said talks between his party and the Free Democrats today would deal with allocating prospective cabinet posts. The two parties plan to cut the number of portfolios from the present 19 to 15 or less.

Kuehn said the parties would submit their proposed government program to their parliamentary groups for approval Friday—12 days earlier than expected—and the new coalition might be announced that day.

After five hours of talks Wednesday, Kuehn told reporters:

"We have achieved a measure of agreement so good no one would have thought it possible when the talks began. We only have some loose strings to tie up and everything is perfect."

A coalition between the Social Democrats and Free Democrats would make Foreign Minister Willy Brandt the first Social Democratic chancellor since Herman Muller in 1928-30.

Together the Social and Free Democrats would command a 12-seat majority over the Christian Democrats in the 496-seat Bundestag, West Germany's parliament. The Social Democrats won 224 seats Sunday, the Free Democrats 30 and the Christian Democrats 242.

The present coalition government of Christian Democrats and Social Democrats expires at midnight, Oct. 19.

Prison Populations Rise Minimally From Last Year

OTTAWA (CP) — A total of 23,448 persons were in federal penitentiaries, provincial institutions or training schools March 31, Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported today. The figure was a slight increase over the total of 23,368 a year earlier.

The survey showed that a number of provincial institutions, including 10 of the 21 training schools for boys, were overcrowded.

Standard capacity at the Bowden Institution, Innisfail, Alta., is 60 but there were 100 boys there March 31.

Overcrowding also was reported at 13 of the 171 provincial adult institutions. At Manitoba's Eastern jail, 512 men were being held in quarters for 478.

Among the federal penitentiaries one was above capacity and the other 10 below. The one above was in Saskatchewan, where 668 men were in quarters for 520.

FACILITIES RAPPED

Provincial and municipal jail facilities were severely criticized by Dorothy McArton of Winnipeg in the recent Ouimet report on corrections.

The federal report, compiled by a committee led by Mr. Justice Roger Ouimet of Montreal, advocated increased use of probation and other alternatives to jail or prison.

Mrs. McArton, a member, added a minority report to emphasize the poor state of provincial and municipal jails. She said they were bad enough to impair the mental, physical and moral health of a normal person.

Provincial institutions on the Prairies were all at more than 90 per cent of capacity. The high was Manitoba at 95.5 per cent, the low among all the provinces was Quebec at 54.5 per cent.

Both British Columbia and Alberta had more men incarcerated in provincial institutions than did Quebec. The combined population of both the western provinces is far lower than Quebec's.

Over-all statistics at March 31 showed 7,117 prisoners in federal prisons; 12,538 in provincial institutions; and 3,793 in training schools.

Civil Rights Head Jailed By Wisconsin

MADISON, Wis. (AP) — Angry legislators voted a contempt and jail sentence Wednesday night against Rev. James E. Groppi, leader of three days of welfare demonstrations that have kept the Wisconsin Capitol in turmoil.

The civil rights leader had been arrested on a Dane County warrant and was being held in lieu of bond when the assembly voted 71-24 to order him jailed.

Legislators said they believe it was the first use of the 100-year-old contempt statute. It calls for incarceration to the end of the legislative session, or for six months, whichever is shortest.

Also taken into custody was Ralph Chase, a Groppi lieutenant and co-ordinator of the welfare recipients' march 90 miles from Milwaukee to press their demands for legislative restoration of welfare cuts and urban aids in the state budget.

A Negro woman and two white women also were arrested in a scuffle that broke out as demonstrators, some of them with children, tried to breach lines of national guardsmen surrounding the Capitol.

Groppi and Chase were charged with disorderly conduct in Monday's takeover of the state assembly chambers in the Capitol. Demonstrators occupied the chamber for 11 hours before officers ejected them.

NIXON'S THE ONE

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Nixon personally approved the United States Central Intelligence Agency's decision not to provide witnesses in the murder trial of six U.S. Special Forces men in South Vietnam (Green Berets), the White House said Wednesday.

The White House acknowledgement of the president's involvement followed increasing speculation that the decision to drop the case was taken at the highest level.

The army said Monday that the CIA's refusal to testify was the reason for its decision to drop the case against six Green Berets, accused of killing a Vietnamese reported to have been a double agent.

Boy Suspected

VERNON (CP)—Police say a 10-year-old boy, suspected of starting a fire in the Oyama, B.C., elementary school Monday, has been left in custody of his parents. The fire, set in a janitor's room, forced evacuation of 85 students and three teachers.

Caouette Makes Bid In Quebec

QUEBEC (CP)—In the larger swirl of political controversy over a language policy for Quebec, campaigning in four provincial byelections next week has been scarcely audible.

Twenty candidates have been nominated in the four ridings—Montreal Ste. Marie, Montreal St. Jacques, Vaudreuil-Soulanges and Trois-Rivieres.

The voting Wednesday is the first formal test for Real Caouette's Ralliement des Creditistes at the provincial level.

But only the four candidates of the governing Union Nationale party will be identified on the ballots by party. The other 16 are described as independents or have no party designation since none belong to a party that ran 10 official candidates in the last Quebec general election.

Neither the provincial Liberals nor the separatist Parti Quebecois have entered candidates.

Only the Creditistes have fielded four candidates to compete against those nominated for Union Nationale, which previously held three of the ridings. The fourth, Vaudreuil-Soulanges, was held by a Liberal.

USC ENTERS TWO

Another group known as United Social Credit, a splinter party disowned by the Creditistes, has candidates in St. Jacques and Vaudreuil-Soulanges.

Present standings in the 108-seat Quebec national assembly are: Union Nationale 53, Liberal 48, independents 3, vacant 4. Among the independents are Rene Levesque, leader of Parti Quebecois, and Gaston Tremblay, who calls himself a Creditiste member.

Apart from the Caouette thrust to move into Quebec politics electorally, the byelection campaigns have been overshadowed by the continuing language controversy following a riot Sept. 10 in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard and by the broader aspects of the Liberal party leadership race to replace Jean Lesage.

Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand has promised legislation to settle school language friction on Montreal Island, but the next session of the national assembly starts Tuesday and there will be no change in the status quo before the byelections.

The 14 federal Creditistes, all elected to the Commons from Quebec ridings, have pledged support to the four byelection candidates.

WAITS FOR RESULTS

Mr. Caouette said he will lead both the federal and Quebec parties, but will not personally move into Quebec politics until the party becomes established provincially.

"The people say they want me in Quebec," he said in Montreal. "Well, let them elect my candidates and I will come."

The Creditistes expect a lot of byelection publicity will be generated this weekend at a convention in Montreal which, ironically, will attempt to place the party on a national footing and confirm Mr. Caouette as national leader.

About 1,000 delegates from across Canada are expected for the meeting Saturday and Sunday which may change the party's name in favor of one with a more national flavor.

Meanwhile Mr. Lesage, who resigned as provincial Liberal leader Aug. 28, says the byelections are meaningless. The Liberals were not contesting them because the party "is in a period of transition" preparing for the leadership convention Jan. 16-17 that will name his successor.

EXAMINERS NAMED

J. C. Lort, head of the Greater Victoria public library system, has been elected chairman of the board of examiners for certification of professional librarians.

Others on the board are Miss Aileen Tufts of the Vancouver Public Library, Miss Sheila Egoff of the school of librarianship, University of British Columbia; D. W. Halliwell of the University of Victoria's library; and R. L. Davison of the library development commission.

Operating under the provincial Public Libraries Act, the board's function is to evaluate academic qualifications of applicants for professional librarianship certificates.

The board has recently been reorganized to come under the Provincial Secretary's department instead of the department of education.

Lort succeeds Davison, who has been appointed secretary of the board.

Sniffing Fatality

SASKATOON (CP) — A coroner's jury recommended Wednesday that manufacturers and vendors of glue and other volatile substances establish an education program to publicize the dangers of inhaling fumes from such products. The jury ruled that Dennis Olynuk, 16, died Sept. 14 as a result of sniffing glue.

THE ACCOUNTANT'S ADVICE

Tax Payments Confusing

(This is a service provided by the Times and by the Institute of Chartered Accountants of British Columbia.)

By EDGAR A. DOWNEY, CA

Income tax instalments are a frequent cause of misunderstanding between the tax department and individual taxpayers.

For the majority of employed individuals income taxes are, in effect, paid in monthly instalments by deduction from the wage or salary pay cheque. Then the balance of over or under deduction is adjusted by refund or additional direct payment with the annual tax return.

There are, however, a large number of people who earn income from sources other than wages or salaries. If this "other source" income is more than one quarter of the total income, then tax must be paid by instalments on that other source income.

These instalments are due at the end of each of the four quarters, March 31, June 30, Sept. 30 and Dec. 31, during the year the income is received.

The amount of the instalments is normally based upon the taxable income of the previous year but at the tax rates for the current year. This may be a complicated calculation. For most people who are required to pay instalments it is reasonable to simply use the total tax for the previous year and pay one quarter of that amount for each quarterly instalment. Then the over or under payment must be adjusted with the tax return in the same way as for people who pay their tax by payroll deductions.

The first of such quarterly payments, due on March 31 for a year, does cause some confusion because it occurs about the same date as the individual is settling the remainder of his tax for the previous year. The taxpayer may be faced with two payments about the same time but they relate to two separate tax years.

Failure to pay instalments makes the taxpayer subject to interest upon the unpaid amount from the date the payments were due. This interest charge is still only 6 per cent a year and many people accept it as a relatively low price to pay for money.

However, interest paid to the tax department is not an allowable expense for purposes of determining taxable income so it is not directly comparable. If a taxpayer borrows money for investment to produce income the interest is deductible as an expense against that income.

Thus, if his top tax rate is, say, 30 per cent, $100 paid out as 10 per cent interest will save $30 tax so his after-tax cost would be only $70 or effectively 7 per cent after tax.

France Takes Spot On Uranium Market

PARIS (Reuters) — France Wednesday became the fourth country to offer uranium on world markets, with the creation here of a sales firm called Uranex.

The company was formed by the French Atomic Energy Commission, the Societe Miniere Pechiney-Mekta and the Compagnie Francaise des Minerais d'Uranium, which together hold the majority interests in mines containing some 10 per cent of the world's uranium reserves, in France, Gabon, Niger and the Central African Republic.

Business Must Play Full Role'

HALIFAX (CP) — G. Arnold Hart, chairman and chief executive officer of the Bank of Montreal, said Wednesday the business community "must concern itself directly with the goal of improving the quality of life in Canada for all Canadians."

He told the 40th annual meeting of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce that businessmen and corporations should play a greater role in solving the country's economic and social problems.

Mr. Hart said there is plenty of scope for action "since business, after all, is an integral and essential part of our total society, and self-interest alone demands that business play its full role in ensuring that the healthy development of the community as a whole is not inhibited by failure or decay in any of its parts."

He called on business to take a more active part in fighting poverty since it is evident that economic growth alone cannot solve this problem.

NOT ANSWER

While convinced that the current "welfare system" and government policy is not the answer to poverty, Mr. Hart said business had "gone off the track in the past in criticizing the traditional government approach" and not "really suggesting anything constructive to take its place aside from the well-known virtues of hard work, thrift and charity, and the undoubted benefits of private enterprise and individual initiative."

Business should have a "more direct involvement in the provision of training programs to upgrade skills and generally to help poor families, especially the young people in poor families, to develop their income-earning potentials."

Mr. Hart said incentives should be provided to business to encourage it to "mount the sort of attack on poverty that is required." Business should "be less reluctant to enter into partnership with government to achieve our common goals."

New Bid to Avert Wheat Price War

BRUSSELS (Reuters) — Representatives of major wheat-exporting countries met here today in a new attempt to avert a wheat price war.

At stake is the future form of the one-year-old International Grains Arrangement which links major exporters and importers.

The three-year arrangement sets floor and ceiling prices for exporters, but a world wheat glut, brought about by five years of bumper crops, has led in recent months to undercutting of prices.

The latest of a series of recriminations came last month when the U.S. accused Canada of making a cut-price deal with the Philippines.

At the current two-day meeting, the U.S. is seeking a revision of the grains arrangement to adjust the minimum price to a lower level.

Henreik S. Houthakker, a member of President Nixon's Council of Economic Advisers, recently said wheat prices were some 15 to 20 per cent below minimums. The arrangement was poorly conceived, drafted and administered, he added.

But the European Common Market is expected to resist any lowering of the minimum prices as this would force it to increase subsidies to its less efficient farmers.

Canada, which has a surplus of wheat, also is against reducing prices.

Also attending the meeting are representatives from Argentina and Australia.

Canada's delegation, led by the assistant deputy trade minister, Maurice Schwarzman, includes representatives of the agriculture department and the Canadian wheat board.

French Fighting Again in Chad Revolt

PARIS (Reuters) — French troops are fighting their first prolonged campaign since the Algerian war in the vast, sparsely populated central African country of Chad where nomadic rebels are challenging the government.

The fighting has all the characteristics of a classic guerrilla war—ambushes, no fixed battle lines, accusations that the rebels are receiving external aid and a government facing an elusive enemy.

The intervention of the French soldiers, spearheaded by 400 Foreign Legion paratroops, has been cloaked in official silence here since it started in August.

But official French sources now say there are about 1,500 French troops in the landlocked country which is twice the size of France and has a population of 3,500,000.

The French troops joined in the fighting against the rebels after President Francois Tombalbaye of Chad asked for their help under a defence agreement with France.

The French troops are fighting in the centre and east of the country, say latest reports here.

The rebels, who oppose the government for tribal reasons and because of various administrative policies, appear to have their main strength in the north, an area inhabited by mainly nomadic Moslem tribes.

Travellers returning from Chad recently say there also are substantial pockets of rebels in some southern regions near the borders with the Central African Republic and Cameroun.

RELATIONS ARE TENSE

Tombalbaye, who has ruled Chad since it became independent from France in 1960, has his capital at Fort Lamy in the extreme southwest of the country.

Relations have never been easy between the nomadic northerners, a mixture of Arab, Berber and Negro peoples, and the more settled southerners.

The rebel leader, Dr. Abba Sidick, lives in Tripoli, Libya, where he works at a hospital.

He has denied government accusations that his movement, the National Chad Liberation Front, is helped from abroad.

The Liberation Front, founded in Khartoum, Sudan, in 1966 by Ibrahim Abatcha, launched its first attack on an administrative and police post in Chad in September, 1967.

Abatcha was killed in battle early in 1968.

Recent press reports from Chad say the Foreign Legionnaires have killed more than 200 rebels in the last four months while the French have suffered only one accidental death.

Farmers Told to Seek Broad, National Base

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmers Union, warned Tuesday that Canadian farmers must fight against government policies which would "lock them" into narrow provincial structures.

Mr. Atkinson told a convention of the NFU's Ontario region that farmers must be united on as broad a base as possible in order to meet the economic pressure of multi-national corporations.

"If you're going to build a countervailing power against the power of the corporations you can't do it by being locked into a provincial or a commodity-producers' organization. You have to do it on a national base."

His warning was in keeping with most of the proceedings at the two-day convention which ended Tuesday, marking the end of 17 years of independent action by the Ontario Farmers Union and its integration into the NFU, founded in Winnipeg last July.

REFLECT OLD GOALS

Many resolutions approved by the 500 delegates and transferred to the national level reflect traditional policy, goals and grievances of the provincial organization. Principle resolutions included proposals for:

—Creation of national grain and meat authorities to be controlled by farmers and with power to bargain collectively for higher prices;

—Withholding of beef cattle from the North American market in an effort to "bring the buyers to the table" to give farmers a bigger share of high retail prices;

—Publication of a French-language edition of the NFU monthly, The Union Farmer;

—Development of collective bargaining in purchase of "inputs"—the goods such as fertilizer, twine, machinery which farmers must purchase from farm-supply corporations.

Plane Theft Plot Charged By Lebanese

BEIRUT (Reuters) — Two wounded Russians, one a senior diplomat, were under close guard in a military hospital here Wednesday after a late night gun battle in which Lebanese military police claimed to have smashed a bizarre spy plot.

An official Lebanese statement said that the Russians—embassy First Secretary Alexandre Khomiakov and Vladimir Vasiliev—planned to bribe a dismissed Lebanese air force officer to steal a French-built Lebanese Mirage jet fighter for them.

The bribe—a cheque for $200,000—was seized from the Russians along with $2,500 in $20 bills of U.S. currency when military police raided a Soviet diplomat's apartment Tuesday night.

The statement did not say whether the flyer, Hassan Badawi, dismissed as a pilot officer for misconduct five years ago, was in the apartment when the police burst in. But it said all three were arrested.

It said one of the Russians was severely wounded in the gun fight but did not say which one. Two policemen, one an officer, also were wounded in the fray.

The Lebanese statement said Badawi was to have been paid to steal a Mirage, main weapon of the tiny Lebanese air force.

But it did not say where it was to have been flown.

Elk Lake Curbs On Waterskiing Surfacing Again

Water ski regulations on Elk Lake in Saanich will be considered soon by the municipal parks and recreation committee.

From there, the proposals will go to a public hearing, Ald. William Noel, chairman of parks and outdoor recreation committee, said Wednesday.

"It hasn't died," he said, referring to the three months which have passed since the proposed regulations were referred to the municipal solicitor.

"I just phoned this morning to get an appointment for a meeting of the parks and recreation committee on the meetings agenda."

He said the long delay was due to a number of legal ramifications in the proposals and questions as to what a municipality can and cannot do legally. There also had been discussions with senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread and the federal transport department.

Ald. Noel said the meeting of the parks and recreation committee should be held in the next week or two.

DISCUSSIONS

The earlier proposals included police permits for boats with engines over 10 horsepower, protection of areas designated for swimming and the water intake for the Saanich Peninsula, a specific course for water skiers to follow and penalties including impounding of speedboats on the first offence.

General agreement on the tougher proposals has been voiced both by water skiers and by the Elk Lake and Saanich Ratepayers Association.

PANASONIC

Shouldn't it be the other way around?

Some people buy color TV's because they look nice. In the store. And when they get the sets home, they own a beautiful piece of furniture. And a nice color TV.

We think it should be the other way around.

At Panasonic, we make the color part of the color TV like it was the only part you were buying. That's why we design and make every vital component ourselves. That way, we don't put together color TV's. We make them.

And we put a lot of special things inside our color TV's. Like Panalock. Which makes fine tuning as automatic as pressing a button. And which adjusts itself everytime you switch channels.

And we put in Speed-O-Vision to give you picture and sound. Quickly. That way, you don't need an appointment with your television.

And a color indicator light that automatically tells you when color is being broadcast.

And we put in a few other devices like something to keep your picture from getting messed up everytime your neighbor runs his power tools.

And something to keep color from creeping into your black and white picture. And to give you absolute color purity all the time. On every channel. And even a special device that gives you strong color in weak reception areas.

So stop in at any Panasonic dealer. Our cabinets are handsome. And our color is worth watching.

CARRIER BIDS ROCKET —ALL THE WAY TO $9

Bidding for the HMCS Bonaventure is "skyrocketing."

When Prime Minister Trudeau announced the outdated aircraft carrier was for sale, the city of Vancouver jumped in with a $1 bid.

Parksville responded with a $3 offer and now the Associated Chambers of Commerce of Northern Vancouver Island have tripled that bid.

In a telegram to Trudeau, Gerry Furney, chairman of the chambers' transportation committee, made a $9 offer for use of the Bonaventure as a car ferry between Alert Bay, Sointula and Port McNeill.

RCMP in Search Of Black Panthers

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP announced Wednesday that a series of raids carried out in Ottawa Monday were aimed at turning up three American members of the Black Panthers, a militant Negro group, who are sought by authorities in the United States.

The federal police force, which carried out the raids with city police, confirmed that large amounts of Black Panther literature were collected in the raids at several Ottawa premises. They also reported seizure of a plastic bomb, devices believed to be smoke bombs, "items suspected to be plastic explosives, two sawed-off shotguns and a large quantity of shotgun ammunition."

Also seized were "personal effects believed to belong to Robert Jerry Bruce, Nathaniel Walter Junior and Merrill Dennis Harvey, members of the Black Panther Party," the RCMP statement said.

The statement added that "these fugitives" were last seen at the Ottawa address Sept. 27.

That was the day after a shooting incident at a Quebec-New York border point. It had another link to the Panthers.

Jesus Mark White, 23, of Brooklyn, N.Y., was found dead of a bullet wound in the head near Lacolle, Que., a few hours after he shot and wounded three customs officers who had found literature and papers linking him with the Panther movement in a routine search of his luggage. White was aboard a bus bound for Canada. Police believe he committed suicide.

The RCMP statement gave these descriptions of the men:

—Bruce, Negro male, 21, six-feet-two, 165 pounds, wanted by the U.S. Federal Bureau of Investigation for unlawful flight to avoid prosecution on charges of kidnapping and assault with intent to commit murder.

—Junior, Negro male, 22, six feet, 158 pounds, wanted by the FBI on a bond default charge for failure to appear concerning an arrest for attempted purchase of machine-guns. Junior is believed to be a field secretary of the Black Panthers.

—Harvey, 23, Negro male, six feet, 155 pounds. left eye is glass, wanted on the same charge as Junior. He is believed to be a captain of defence for the Panthers.

Flossie and Friends Draw Court Action

A 14-year-old cow named Flossie was involved in injunction brought by North Saanich municipality in Victoria county court Tuesday.

The municipality objected to the presence of a cow (Flossie), a steer and a number of chickens, ducks and rabbits on Residential A land owned by Mr. and Mrs. Rowland Alger at 10960 Chalet.

It claimed that the Algers are farming on residential land.

The Algers say they are not farming because they're not raising animals for profit and do not sell any of the produce.

"The municipality's zoning bylaw makes no mention of a ban on raising animals in its residential areas," said lawyer Herbert L. Matthews for Mr. and Mrs. Alger.

He called several other North Saanich residents who testified that there are several residential areas where sheep, horses and other animals are kept.

For the municipality, Cecil O. D. Branson argued that this is immaterial.

"North Saanich is allowed discretion in the enforcement of its bylaw," he said, "but an injunction begun in the summer of 1967 should be upheld. Inequality of enforcement is irrelevant to this case.

Matthews questioned the court's authority to determine how many animals a property owner should have.

"Is it for this court to say you can have a dozen chickens . . . or 24 chickens?"

Judge Montague Drake reserved judgment.

Chairman Mao Beams At Marching Masses

By NORMAN WEBSTER
(Special to the Times)

PEKING—Communist Party Chairman Mao Tse-tung spent more than two hours in Peking's brilliant sunshine Wednesday as representatives of his China marched in review on the 20th anniversary of the People's Republic.

Mao stood with China's top leadership throughout the parade high up on Tien An Men, the Imperial Gate of Heavenly Peace, then they walked to both the east and west sides of the gate to wave at the crowd of approximately half a million in the giant Tien An Men Square.

SHOW'S STAR

The Chinese people, clutching Mao's red book of quotations, strained to see him and roared again and again a "long long life to Chairman Mao" (in Chinese, a rhythmic four-syllable chant). Foreigners in the reviewing stands also scrambled to catch a glimpse of Mao or snap a long-range picture.

The National Day address was delivered by Vice-Chairman Lin Piao, who told revolutionaries throughout the world to prepare to wage war against "wars of agression launched by an imperialism or social-imperialism, especially one in which atom bombs are used as weapons."

"If such a war breaks out," he said, "the people of the world should use revolutionary war to eliminate the war of aggression, and preparations should be made right now."

Speaking specifically of China, Lin said: "We warn U.S. imperialism and social-imperialism, the heroic Chinese people and the Chinese people's liberation army armed with Mao Tse-tung thought are invincible. Should you insist on imposing a war on the Chinese people, we will keep you company and resolutely fight to the finish.

BURIAL GROUND

"On the vast land of China, wherever you go, there will be your burial ground."

The armed readiness of the Chinese people was a notable theme in the parade. Thousands of militia armed with automatic weapons-men and women, some quite young-marched through the square of heavenly peace during the approximately hour and a half parade.

The emphasis on China's militia has increased during the past year since the increasingly bitter border clashes with the Soviet Union and the leadership's call to prepare for war. Lin said: "U.S. imperialism and social-imperialism are in collusion and at the same time contending with each other, carrying out arms expansion and war preparations and wildly attempting to engineer a war of aggression against our country and flagrantly resorting to nuclear blackmail against us."

He restated the stand that China will not attack unless attacked, but if attacked will certainly counterattack. Identical statements were made by Premier Chou En-lai at a gala banquet on the eve of National Day in a joint editorial by People's Daily, Red Flag and the Liberation Army Daily.

And Premier Chou Avoids Insulting Soviet Guests

(Special to The Times)

PEKING — Chinese Premier Chou En-Lai told 4,000 guests at a gala banquet on the eve of the Oct. 1 National Day that China was developing nuclear weapons for defense only and will never commit aggression against others.

He repeated the line China has taken in the past: "We develop nuclear weapons solely for defence and for breaking the nuclear monopoly, and our ultimate aim is to eliminate nuclear weapons."

He made no mention of China's latest nuclear test, which has not been announced in China itself.

NO NAMES

The premier also made no reference by name to Russia, with which China has had bitter border and ideological clashes during the past year. A joint National Day editorial in the Peoples' Daily, Red Flag and the Liberation Army Daily, said China stands for negotiated settlement of border conflicts between countries.

At last year's Sept. 30 banquet the premier attacked Soviet aggression in Czechoslovakia and diplomats from the Soviet Union, East Germany, Poland, Bulgaria, Hungary and Mongolia walked out. This year there were digs at "modern revisionism" and "social-imperialism." But no names were mentioned and no one had to leave the table.

ALMOST 4,000

More than 350 tables, each seating 11 persons, were set up in the Great Hall of the People on the edge of Tien An Men Square, site of the parade to mark the 20th anniversary of the founding of the People's Republic of China.

Although Mao Tse-tung was not at the banquet, guests waved his red book of quotations and chanted "a long, long life to Chairman Mao" when Premier Chou walked to the rostrum to speak.

Chou's speech was similar to the one delivered the following day by Defence Minister Lin Piao, Mao's designated successor, to the 500,000 parade marchers.

QUOTES MAO

In the speech the premier quoted Mao to the effect that China will not attack others, but if attacked will certainly counter-attack. The premier added: "We must make full preparations against the war threats of U.S. imperialism and social imperialism, including their nuclear war threats. If they should insist on imposing a war of aggression on us, we will firmly resist to the end until final victory."

Labor Body Rejects Party Disaffiliation Bid

An attempt to wedge trade union support away from political action was defeated on the floor of Victoria Labor Council Wednesday night.

Carpenters union delegate Larry Tickner introduced a resolution for consideration at the B.C. Federation of Labor convention at Vancouver Nov. 3-7, in which he referred to the "divisive" effects of alignment.

In the interests of trade union unity, his resolution said, the Federation should render support to no political party.

The resolution, it was noted, conflicts with both Federation and Canadian Labor Congress policies favoring the New Democratic Party.

The resolution drew heated comment from several delegates, on both sides of the issue, and was finally rejected by a bote of 11-12.

An effort to substitute the word affiliation for support also was defeated.

VLC vice-president Neil Hindle told the meeting: "If you support this resolution now you are throwing your future right out that window."

He warned that some of the "naive people" holding a vote would pass a resolution of this kind. "The most important thing you can become aware of is the political scene," Hindle said.

RUBBER STAMP

A delegate said he was "getting fed up with the suggestion that we accept everything that comes down from the top," and that the labor council should be a rubber stamp for the CLC.

He reminded others that they belong to a democratic society, "but it won't be if we allow this type of organization to infiltrate the labor movement."

A second Tickner resolution, urging that all members join and support a political party of his choice, was given full endorsation.

Among resolutions recommended by the council executive and passed by delegates was one urging the labor movement to abstain from support to Israel until that country is willing to abide by requests for bringing the Mid-East conflict to a halt. The Canadian labor movement supports Israeli labor organization.

Another gave a vote of confidence to the United Nations as the only means toward world peace.

A third urged local amalgamation as an economic method of municipal or area government.

Delegates rejected a resolution urging formation of union appeal boards appointed from members of the general public where individuals could take executive decisions felt to be adverse.

Rail Land Feud

VANCOUVER (CP) — County Judge E. E. Hinkson, sitting in British Columbia Supreme Court chambers, Wednesday granted the B.C. Harbors Board an injunction restraining two Delta property owners. The two, Joseih Neil and Kenneth Flach, had barred construction crews from their property, expropriated for a rail link to the Roberts Bank port site.

Lively Handbag Sets Him Running

LONDON (UPI) — Ripping away a board in a shop, demolition worker Rick Ward saw what he thought was a crocodile-skin bag Tuesday.

He bent down to pick it up and the "bag began hissing and spitting. Ward ran out screaming.

It was a boa constrictor that had escaped from the pet shop next door.

Bomb Test Objection Registered by Labor

Victoria Labor Council Wednesday added its protest against atomic bomb testing in the Aleutians.

Delegates endoresed a telegram to U.S. President Nixon Tuesday which read:

"We request that you call off hazardous Amchitka project, fearing tragic consequences to local environment. No testing should take place until safety of surrounding area is guaranteed."

UVIC ENDORSED

The exectuvie, followed by council delegates, also endorsed University of Victoria student action Wednesday, when 2,500 demonstrated at the Causeway against the Amchitka blast.

Student union president Norman Wright was congratulated for an orderly protest. "I was impressed by the action of the student body," said VLC secretary Larry Ryan, who took part in the demonstration.

He was hopeful that reaction of students around the world would affect the policies of the super powers relating to atomic testing.

One delegate protested the waste of council funds in sending a telegram to Washington. He said he could see no benefit coming from such an isolated gesture.

Former council president Robert Barrie said the message may have not influence on the current test decision, but it could affect future policy.

His principal objection, he said, was to the attorney-general's threat of police action against students taking part in the demonstration if the public was impeded.

A delegate said it was "a sad thing there wasn't 2,500 working people to support them."

Another said it seemed a "sorry state of affairs" if the labor council was not prepared to support such action.

He said he was impressed with the involvement of youth in affairs of the day. "It doesn't take guts to stand up and be counted on this issue; it's just a matter of jumping on the bandwagon."

STUDENT 'SHEEP' PROTESTED TOO

One student chose to dissent when protesters deluged the Victoria International Airport on Wednesday.

A thin blond youth of about 20 years suddenly burst from the ranks of the demonstration with a sign that read "Students Are Sheep."

He entered the terminal and began to picket the picketers.

As passengers attempted to leave, he told them:

"This is just a paper blockade. There are a bunch of bullies out there but all you have to do is be persistent and they'll back down ."

He carried a miniature American flag.

Bill WALKER

An attractive hostess with pointed eyebrows and a floor-length side-harem split gown brought the coffee while the coach and general manager of the San Diego Gulls was finishing his soup course.

This was in a downtown hostelry and Max McNab, at 45 one of the elder citizens of the Western Hockey League's board of distinguished personnel, was saying how nice it was to be back in Canada, for a time, but that he and his family were quite happy, thank you, with life in San Diego.

"We weren't quite sure how it would go," he said of the move that saw him leave Vancouver three years ago when the late Fred Hume of Vancouver sold the Canucks, and Max was offered, and accepted, the post in San Diego, then a spanking new WHL franchise.

"But we like it. My wife is happy there, the boys have settled down well to the change, are playing hockey and football, and, you know, we've never been back since we left B.C.," he said.

Which speaks volumes for life with the McNabs, who likely have been as good for San Diego as San Diego has been for them.

For Max took a brand new club, at least the best he could muster from other WHL clubs, but really not seriously competent enough to get the job done, into San Diego's sparkling new arena and proceeded to set an attendance record that first season.

The word for attendance was "again", in 1967-68, and "again" in 1968-69. With new records each year, "you see we can't help feel that the reception has been wonderful," he commented with a knowing smile.

And with that wonderful reception, would you be thinking about the NHL, expansion, $6 million? The questions immediately had to follow because San Diego, the newest big city on the coast, except for a bad run with pro baseball this past summer, has treated its professional athletes with due respect, particularly at the box office.

Of the $6 million expansion fee demanded of the Canucks, McNab said succinctly:

"The value of land usually doesn't triple in three years, unless there's oil under it, and I haven't heard of any oil being found in Vancouver lately."

The original expansion fee was $2 million.

●

"The National Hockey League? Certainly, it's a goal in the future," he admitted, although he cautioned that WHL clubs are not allowed to talk about expansion with the NHL without express permission of the WHL," and we haven't asked for that permission, yet."

And then with the neatest manoeuvre since his playing days, McNab stickhandled your agent out of his pantywaist, and confided:

"San Diego is ready for the NHL, when the NHL is ready for San Diego, but only under the proper circumstances."

The simple reason could be that Max and the Gulls are prepared to stay with the present, which has been good to them, and wait for the NHL to come to them.

"There must be a master plan somewhere for expansion," he said. "And I'm sure that San Diego would have to be a part of it. I foresee the day when the WHL, or at least a six team section of it, will be in operation on the west coast as part of the NHL."

But not at today's prices. The implication was obvious when McNab said:

"If it will take Vancouver 10 years, at least, with capacity crowds to write off the $6 million franchise fee, think how long it would take us with an arena seating 3,000 fewer."

McNab sees San Francisco as a better NHL bet for the future than Oakland, but then he has had that thinking for the past eight years.

●

When Vancouver's Coley Hall first moved into the Bay area in the 1961-62 season, McNab was his right-hand man and coach.

Max readily recalls those early days and says "we had to find out a few things about our new home, so we decided to take crowd samplings, their opinions, their dislikes, and where they lived, etc.

"In those days, and even on our best nights, Oakland showed up poorly for fan potential, and seldom was better than two per cent," he said.

"This to me indicated that our customer appeal was strickly in the San Francisco region."

But McNab left San Francisco the next year to return to the Canucks, under Hume, who had purchased the club, and was replaced by Bud Poile. Thus he didn't have much say when the franchise was shifted to the spanking new Coliseum in the Oakland multi-million-dollar sports complex.

"It wasn't popular then, it isn't now, they lost a milion and a half in one season and haven't shown a profit yet," he pointed out.

Having been through both mills, in Canada and the States, it seemed obvious that McNab would have the answer to the promotional problem that bugs new teams.

And he came up with a new one.

●

"Image making," he suggested bluntly. "Image making and then trying to get the player to live it down."

"Down there," he said, "they have to have a name player to hang a tag on, and if they haven't got one, they have to make one.

"It gets so bad that players get enamored with their own importance, which really isn't that important, and then they think they should be paid for it."

Hockey generally in the States?

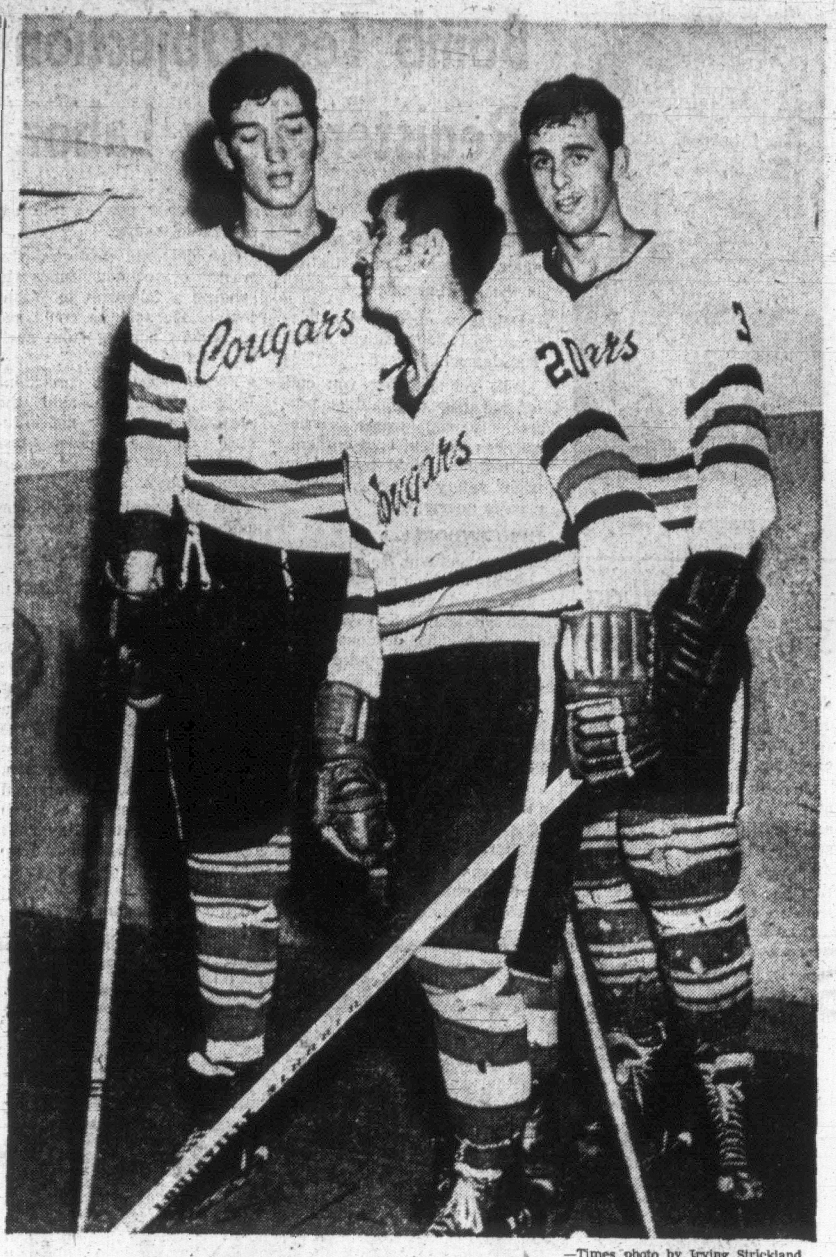

"We've got a good minor program in Southern California," he said. "Registration is growing each year there, and across the country; an extensive college program is under way in the east, and may filter out this way in time."

And if you were wondering what the going price for a WHL franchise was when Hume sold out, in 1966, here's that story, too.

"There were three bids," Max recalled. "One was eliminated early and the other two were identical. One of these was from Cy McLean, president of the Canucks today, the other by a group headed by Frank McMahon.

"After much thought," Hume sold to McLean," McNab said, "because McLean was a long-time associate of his and Hume, being a very sincere man, wanted to do the right thing by his personal friend."

The price? $550,000.

SEASON STARTS SATURDAY

Little man between pair of tall Cats is Ted Plowe, five-foot, seven inch player from Williams Lake who is bidding for regular berth with Victoria Cougars in B.C. Junior Hockey League. Plowe is expected to see action at Memorial Arena Saturday night along with six-four Dale Pennock (left) of San Diego and six-two Randy Bock (right) of Kimberley when Cougars open new season against Penticton Broncos.

Bruin Star Continues Sizzling Scoring Pace

By The Canadian Press

Phil Esposito is scoring goals in National Hockey League exhibition play as he was still in the midst of the 1968-69 season when he won the Art Ross Trophy.

After scoring game-tying goals in two weekend games, Esposito came back for two in a match against New York Rangers Wednesday night and appears to be again setting the pace that won him 49 goals and 77 assists and the scoring championship last season.

However, the high-scoring centre's goal production wasn't enough Wednesday as the Rangers edged Boston Bruins 5-4.

In other exhibition matches, Pittsburgh Penguins downed Los Angeles Kings 5-2, St. Louis Blues defeated Minnesota North Stars 2-0, Chicago Black Hawks whipped Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League 7-5 and Montreal Canadiens and Toronto Maple Leafs tied 3-3.

Esposito's two goals and one by Ron Murphy gave Boston an early 3-0 lead but Bill Fairbairn replied with two goals for New York with Brad Park, Rod Gilbert and Rod Seiling collecting one each.

Ed Westfall got the Bruins' other goal in the contest at Kitchener, Ont.

ALSO SCORED TWO

Dean Prentice and Jean Pronovost also came up with two-goal performances in the Penguins' victory at Brantford, Ont. Jim Morrison got the other Pittsburgh goal while Dennis Hextall and Leon Rochefort replied for Los Angeles.

Murray Oliver's goal with less than three minutes to play gave the Leafs their tie in the match at Toronto.

Mike Walton scored for Toronto early in the first period but goals from Jacques Lemaire, Ralph Backstrom and Mickey Redmond put Montreal into a 3-1 lead going into the third period.

Terry Clancy added a goal for the Leafs in the third.

Stan Mikita and Lou Angotti scored a pair of goals each for the Black Hawks who took their second victory in two nights from the Canucks. Dennis Hull, Jim Wiste and Cliff Koroll also scored against Lynn Zimmerman in the Vancouver nets.

Tony Esposito, Phil's young brother, took over in the Chicago nets after Dennis DeJordy allowed goals by Herb Pinder and Pat Hannigan. Duke Harris scored three goals against Esposito.

Gary Sabourin and Andre Boudrias scored in the second period for the Blues' victory at Eveleth, Minn.

Tonight's schedule has New York Rangers facing the Red Wings in Detroit and Pittsburgh Penguins and Oakland Seals meeting in Oshawa, Ont.

Canadians Third In Senior Event

ST. ANDREWS, Scotland (AP) — The United States produced a three-man aggregate of 230 and held a five-stroke lead over Britain and Ireland Wednesday after the first round of the World Senior amateur golf championship.

Canada was third, another stroke back. Thirteen teams of four players each are competing, but only three of the four scores in each team count towards the over-all score.

Jack Nash, of London, Ont., a member of the Canadian team, shot a 74, the best individual score of the day.

Aggregate scores after the first day: United States 230, Britain and Ireland 235, Canada 236, South Africa 240, Germany 243, France 244, Japan 247, Sweden 254, Mexico 255, Bermuda 260, Italy 261, Portugal 263, Switzerland 265.

Dr. George Bigelow of Victoria had an 80, Phil Farley of Toronto shot an 82 and James C. Boeckh, also of Toronto, had an 85.

Ray Getliffe, president of the Royal Canadian Golf Association, is the Canadian team captain.

McLain Nearing $100,000 Level

DETROIT (AP) — Denny McLain, Detroit Tigers' pitching ace, isn't going to get that talked-about $100,000 next year, but he may come close.

A spokesman for the American League club announced Tuesday that McLain, 24-9, has signed a 1970 contract.

While terms of the contract were not announced, the speculation was that he will be getting $90,000, up from $65,000 this year.

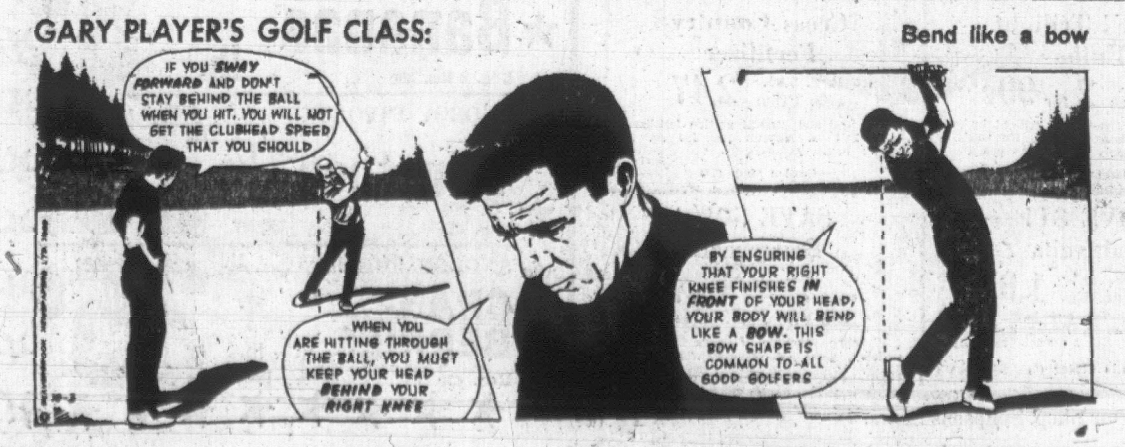

Findlay Elected Sno-Bird Leader

Brian Findlay was elected president of the Sno-Birds Ski Club during the group's annual meeting Wednesday night at The Inn.

Preston Storey was voted in as vice-president while Andy Dery and Bud Peetz were elected secretary and treasurer, respectively.

GARY PLAYER'S GOLF CLASS:

Bend like a bow

LAKERS WIN . . . . . SEVENTH GAME

Perfect Boxla Script

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. (CP) — "The players knew what they had to do and they did it."

That was the philosophical approach taken Wednesday night by coach Bob Allan after his Peterborough Lakers staged a tremendous comeback to edge New Westminster Salmonbellies 9-8 and capture the Canadian professional lacrosse championship.

"What can you say about this series?" said Allan, referring to the fact that it took the full seven games of a best-of-seven series to declare a champion.

"A better script couldn't be written if anybody tried."

Lakers lost the first two games of the series, and were behind 4-2 after the first period of Wednesday's game. After going ahead 8-7 in the second period, the Lakers had to hold off the tough defending champions in the final period to preserve their win.

John Davis, who missed three games with a foot injury, scored once for Peterborough and assisted on two other goals.

Veteran Larry Ferguson got three goals, including the winner, and Bram Wilfong scored twice.

Paul Parnell, who played lacrosse in Ontario before moving west; Al Lewthwaite and Dave Tory each scored twice for the Salmonbellies, who defeated Detroit Olympics last year in the east-west championship finals.

Oriole Coach Takes Positive Approach

BALTIMORE (AP) — Coach Billy Hunter, the eternal optimist of Baltimore Orioles, is ready with his first post-season prediction of 1969.

"If we don't beat the Twins three in a row, we'll take them in four games," Hunter said as the Orioles awaited Saturday's opening game of the American League's best-of-five playoffs against Minnesota.

Hunter went out on a limb during the 1966 World Series, and the Orioles backed up his bold predictions by sweeping four games from Los Angeles Dodgers. His current approach is no less positive.

"Our pitching is really lined up," Hunter said after Jim Palmer beat Detroit Tigers 2-1 Wednesday night on a six-hitter.

Palmer, 16-4, won't start until the third game, however. He'll be preceded by two left-handers—Mike Cuellar, 23-11, and Dave McNally, 20-7, both of whom hurled one-hitters against the Twins this year.

'WE ARE BETTER'

"Man for man," Hunter said, "we're a better ball club. Our hitting has been disappointing lately, but I'm encouraged the way Frank Robinson and Brooks Robinson have been swinging the bat."

"To me, the key to the series could be Paul Blair. If he gets on base a lot, it will make a big difference."

Blair rocked Minnesota pitching for seven homers, 11 runs batted in and a .353 average in 12 regular season games, but is in a lengthy slump.

"This waiting has been killing me," Blair said, after being blanked at the plate again Wednesday. "All I've been thinking about is the playoffs."

The Orioles clinched the Eastern Division pennant Sept. 13, and have compiled only a 9-8 record since. Manager Earl Weaver not only rested the regulars periodically, he also reminded the players to strive to improve personal records.

As a result, Frank Robinson pointed out, team play suffered as batters tried for hits in situations where they would normally concentrate on moving up the runners.

Thompson Was Star Of 'Miracle'

FRESNO, Calif. (AP) — Hank Thompson, who rose to stardom with the miracle New York Giants of the 1950s, hit bottom after retirement and then dedicated his life to helping underprivileged boys, is dead at 43.

Thompson died in a Fresno hospital Tuesday night. He suffered a seizure at his home Monday night and never regained consciousness.

Thompson, an acrobatic third baseman and left-handed hitter, began his baseball career with Kansas City Monarchs of the American Negro League. He was purchased by the Giants in 1949.

Thompson was instrumental in the Giants' dramatic 1951 pennant drive, hitting eight home runs down the stretch.

In the world series that year he set a record by walking seven times. He tied another record in the 1954 series by getting a hit in each game, hitting .365.

He hit 129 major league home runs. His best season was in 1953, when he hit .302.

Mets Respect Atlanta Power

CHICAGO (AP) — It makes no difference to manager Gil Hodges that his New York Mets are facing Atlanta Braves instead of San Francisco Giants in the National League pennant playoff starting Saturday.

"We weren't rooting for any particular team to win the Western Division race, but we sure were pulling for Houston to lose it," Hodges said Wednesday as the Mets closed the regular season against Chicago Cubs.

"We stand the same this season against Atlanta and San Francisco, 8-4, but against Houston we wound up 2-10.

Hodges, who already has named Tom Seaver, Jerry Koosman and Gerry Gentry for the first two playoff games in Atlanta and the third in New York, said the Mets skipped any stretch-drive scouting of the Braves.

"We have played them 12 games and if we don't know all we should know about them, there's something wrong with us," said Hodges.

PRAISES HITTERS

"And we do know they are a fine hitting ball club. Hank Aaron, Orlando Cepeda and Rico Carty all are people who can hurt you with the bat. Hitting is Atlanta's strength, but they have a couple of fine pitchers in Phil Niekro and Ron Reed."

What was Gil's playoff prediction for the Mets who Wednesday notched their 100th victory with a 12-inning, 6-5 decision over the Cubs?

"Do I think we'll win it? Yes, I do, and if we get lucky we could do it in three straight."

Hodges used 21 players, including starter Koosman and five other pitchers, as the Mets recorded their ninth straight triumph.

Manager Leo Durocher of the Cubs said:

"The Mets are playing great ball and everything is going right for them. That's a combination hard for anybody to beat."

BOOKIES PICK BIRDS, BRAVES

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Las Vegas bookmakers have made Atlanta Braves 11-10 favorites over New York Mets in the National League baseball playoff series starting Saturday.

Baltimore Orioles are 3-2 favorites to defeat Minnesota Twins in the American League best-of-five series.

Sagging Turnouts

OTTAWA (CP) — A few weeks ago football talk in the capital revolved around the pitching and running exploits of Ottawa quarterback Russ Jackson. Today it's the sagging home attendance record of the Rough Riders.

With only two home games left in the regular schedule, the Riders who lead the Eastern Conference have drawn about 18,000 fans less than they did at the same point a year ago.

Despite a Grey Cup in 1968, and another exciting, colorful club this season, Riders haven't been able to fill their home grounds once in the two years.

"Perhaps Ottawa fans are becoming so blase that nothing will get them out to the park," said the Ottawa Journal in an editorial Tuesday.

General manager Red O'Quinn blames cable television.

Formosan Provides First-Day Surprise

SINGAPORE (CP) — Defending champions Al Balding and George Knudson of Canada had trouble "reading" the tricky greens and fell five strokes behind the leaders with a one-over-par total of 143 in the opening round of the 17th World Cup golf tournament in this Asian island country.

Hsieh Yung Yo of Formosa, 35-year-old champion of the Asian circuit, provided the biggest opening-day surprise with a sizzling five-under-par 66 that shot his country into a share of the first-round lead with the United States.

It was the day's best round and his partner Hsu Chi San had a one-over-par 72 for a total of 138. The U.S. team of Oville Moody and Lee Trevino also had a 138 total.

Moody carded a 67 and his partner Tevino shot a 71.

Just one stroke behind the Formosans and Americans were a lightly-regarded pair from Thailand, Sukreem Ochum and Suchin Suwanapong. Onchum came up with a 67 and his partner with a 72.

Knudson shot an even-par 71 and Balding had a 72 over the tricky 6,692-yard Bukit Course at the Singapore Island Golf Club.

SELLER'S MARKET—IMLACH

Expansion Terms Hit

TORONTO (CP) — Punch Imlach, former coach and general manager of Toronto Maple Leafs, has compared the National Hockey League's newest plans for expansion to the "Brinks Robbery and the Great Train Robbery."

Imlach, fired by the Leafs last April, makes the comparison on the first of a weekly column he writes for The Telegram.

Since being fired after his club lost the best-of-seven NHL quarter-final series to Boston Bruins last spring, Imlach has written a book and turned down at least one NHL coaching position.

His book, Hockey is a Battle, comes out Oct. 10.

In his column, Imlach raps the NHL owners and sympathizes with the cities which have been offered a franchise for the 1970-71 season.

He says the new teams will receive only the right to play in the NHL for $6,000,000. Under an agreement, each new club will get one goaltender, the last player on an established team's bench and 18 other minor-league players.

Under the previous agreement when six new teams were granted franchises in 1967, the established teams were allowed to protect one goaltender and 11 players.

"So you get less talent for more money — not bad if you are the seller," Imlach says.

Lack of Hoop Officials Might Curtail Program

SIGNING 17th one-year contract as manager of Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday was Walter Alston. Pact with National League baseball club is reported to call for $70,000.

By ERNIE FEDORUK

Basketball, anyone?

There may not be opportunities for all unless bodies start stepping forward to alleviate a manpower shortage that threatens to seriously curtail city basketball play this winter.

The Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association needs bodies with the executive brand.

Victoria Chinooks need bodies capable of performing in the Inter-City Junior Men's League.

The city association's plight was brought to light at the annual general meeting earlier this week. Although it was one of the best-attended sessions in years (approximately 50 answered the roll call), the VDABA was unable to elect a directorate.

No one, it seems, wants to become an executive.

Outgoing president Bob Bird says the situation is "serious."

Bird declined to run for re-election because of "other commitments." In addition to serving as the director of the Knights of Columbus athletic program, Bird has committed himself to coach two girls' teams at St. Ann's Academy as well as to coach the KC bantam and junior bantam football teams. As well, there's a thing about "holding down a job."

Age-Limit Switch Shocks Chinooks

Hopefully, Bird hopes an emergency meeting next Monday (8 p.m., YMCA) will elect an executive to conduct basketball activities for the coming season.

"The association is in good financial condition," he said. "But unless we get someone to help in the operations, all the gains we've made in the past four or five years could go down the drain."

Ten teams were registered with the VDABA five years ago. Last season, registrations reached 63 teams and Bird feels the total will grow to "75, easily . . ." this season.

Because of an unexpected drop in the age limit, manager Harold Turner says the junior Chinooks also are experiencing a crisis.

Chinooks, Turner said, always "considered the future" when they staffed teams. Chinook coaches tried, generally, to include four to six players who would return for a second season.

"That's been one of the secrets of Chinooks' success," he added.

ONE PLAYER RETURNING

"Last year the Canadian Basketball Association raised the junior limit to 22, and we planned accordingly. Last week I was informed the junior limit has returned to 21. It was the first I had heard of it.

"That wipes us out. We have only one player, Chris Hall, returning. With the old age limit, we could have counted on Hall, Mike O'Connor, Dave Wirtanen, Danny Wade, Dave Baade, Glen Moffat and Bill Carlson."

Turner believes there are several high school graduates who could make the grade with Chinooks. Some, he feels, have been reluctant to turn out with the juniors because Chinooks "were set" with a solid nucleus.

WELCOME MAT OUT

"Actually, we were set," says Turner, "until last week . . ."

Chinooks work out this evening (6:30) at Central Junior High. Not-so-happy Harold says he'll greet any and all comers at the door.

And Bob Bird, th the meantime, will wait until Monday.

CAREER END IN SIGHT FOR NAMATH?

BOSTON (AP) — Quarterback Joe Namath of New York Jets said Tuesday night he will probably quit pro football after this season because of his knee injuries.

He then said it would be over "very likely this year."

"I've had a difficult time the first two weeks," he said of the American Football League's initial games of the season.

"At this stage, I need both knees operated on once more; the legs are the very worst they have ever been."

TRIBE LOSES A CHIEF

CLEVELAND (AP) — Grayle Howlett, vice-president of Cleveland Indians since 1961, has resigned from his post with the American Baseball League club. He gave no reason for quitting.

PENALTIES DECIDE CUP SOCCER DUEL

Accuracy on penalty kicks at Royal Athletic Park Wednesday night paved the way for Oak Bay to advance into the final round of the McGavin Cup soccer series.

The defending champions defeated Gorge Molsons 3-2 in Wednesday's semi-final battle after the clubs were deadlocked 1-1 after two hours of play and it was decided to settle the issue on the basis of penalty kicks.

Dan Henry, kicking for Gorge, missed his first attempt from the penalty spot while Bay's Palle Polson scored. Both booters connected on their second shots but Henry missed his third try to give Oak Bay the victory.

Gorge grabbed an early lead on Bill Abbott's penalty goal but John Rostron evened the count before intermission with a header on a fine cross from Peter Wheaton.

Oak Bay meets Victoria West in the cup final on Oct. 13.

Violence Erupts At Boot Battles

By Reuters

Violence flared as nearly 100 teams clashed in three major European soccer competitions Wednesday night.

At Plovdiv in Bulgaria, the Italian team Juventus finished with nine men after a fierce Fairs Cup encounter with a local team, Lokomotiv.

Castano and Furino were both ordered off by Austrian referee Doerer but the Italians still managed to win 2-1 and took the round 5-2 on aggregate. Leonardi shot Juventus into the lead in the 20th minute. Vassilev tied the score after 62 minues but Anastasi fired the winner 16 minutes later.

IRISH TROUBLES

There was more trouble in Coleraine, Northern Ireland, where Rene Langer, inside-left for Luxembourg's Jeunesse d'Esch, was sent off after 79 minutes for foul play. Jeunesse lost the Fairs Cup game 4-0 to slump 6-3 on aggregate.

European Cup matches produced a glut of goals as English champion Leeds United ran up 16-0 aggregate against Norway's Lyn Oslo with a 6-0 away victory.

Legia Warsaw, playing in front of their home crowd, went on a second-half scoring spree against Romania's Uta Arad that produced eight goals for an 8-0 victory and a 10-1 edge on the round.

SWEDES EASED OUT

Benfica of Portugal, and ace Italian side Fiorentina both made predictable progress into the European Cup second round.

Benfica beat Copenhagen BK 5-2 on aggregate after taking a 2-0 advantage from the first leg in Lisbon while Fiorentina eased Swedish side Oesters out of the competition.

Fiorentina won the first leg in Italy 1-0 and beat Osters 2-1 Wednesday. Glasgow Celic, the 1967 European Cup holders from Scotland, moved into the second round with 2-0 aggregate win over Basle of Switzerland.

Newcastle United, England's Fairs Cup holders, were still in the running for a second success in the competition, defeating Dundee United 1-0 to complete a 3-1 aggregate victory.

. . . '42 WINGS MISSED CUP AFTER LEADING 3-0

Day's Lineup Gamble Helped Fashion Great Comeback

This is the fourth of seven installments from a condensed version of "Hockey Dynasty," a new book by Jack Batten that was released last month.

Baten's interesting story deals with the history of the Toronto Maple Leafs from the time Connie Smythe launched his hockey dynasty in 1927 until last spring's firing of coach Punch Imlach and the tax evasion charges brought against Stafford Smythe and Harold Ballard.

By JACK BATTEN

After the long dry spell of the 1930s, Toronto entered the 1941-42 season looking like a set team.

Turk Broda had proved himself the class of the league in goal, and the defence was strong and versatile with Bingo Kampman, Reg Hamilton, Jack Church, Wally Stanowski, perhaps the finest offensive defenceman in the NHL, and Bucko McDonald, the hard-rock bodychecker whom Smythe had bought from Detroit back in 1938.

Besides the Taylor-Carr-Shriner line, Hap Day, the coach who had succeeded Dick Irvin, boasted one other regular and powerful forward line—Syl Apps at centre between Gordie Drillon on right wing and reliable Bob Davidson on left. And for his third offensive grouping, he could choose from among five young pros—Pete Langelle, Hank Goldup, Johnny McCreedy and the Metz brothers, Nick and Don.

Toronto's major difficulty through the season was trying to cope with a—staggering outbreak of ailments and injuries. But in spite of their troubles, Leafs managed to edge into second place by the end of the season, and they entered the playoffs, and their semi-final round against the Rangers, at the peak of health and confidence.

Still, Toronto couldn't match New York in confidence—the Rangers were a noisy, cocky upstart of a team, and they loved to shout about their superiority.

Maybe New York's loud, brash manners made the Leafs mad, or maybe the Toronto team was ready to let fly. Whatever the reason, the Leafs conquered them in a hard-fought semi-final series, and were off to meet Detroit Red Wings in the Stanley Cup final.

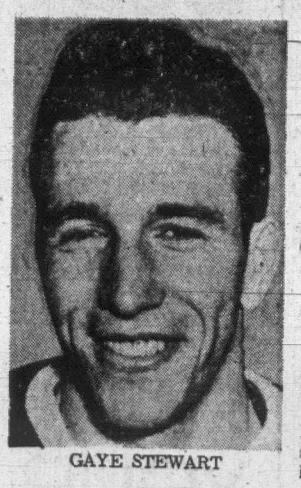

Detroit wasn't expected to put up much opposition for the Leafs. After all, they had finished fifth in the league standings, and most hockey fans, especially in Toronto, were stunned when the Red Wings sailed away with three wins in the first three games. Detroit played scrambly, rapid-fire hockey that utterly baffled the more conventional Leafs.

It was the era before the centre red line was introduced to the NHL, and the Wings would fire the puck into the Leaf zone from outside centre, then skate in swiftly and harass the puck away from the Toronto players, and the strategy worked.

No hockey team had ever responded after falling behind in a Stanley Cup playoff series by three games, and it hardly seemed likely that the demoralized Toronto Maple Leafs would be the first team to pull such a remarkable coup.

But Hap Day held out his hopes, and, after consulting by telephone with Conn Smythe in Camp Petawawa, Day announced two key player changes: he was benching Bucko McDonald and Gordie Drillon in favor of two young men who had seen comparatively little play during the season, Ernie Dickens and Don Metz.

McDonald's replacement was understandable. He was slightly injured and his slow skating style was hardly suited to the helter-skelter strategy of the Red Wings. But Drillon's benching represented just one more cruel episode in the genuinely-tragic Toronto career of a fine hockey player.

On paper, Drillon compiled an unmatchable record with Toronto from the time he joined the team directly from the Young Rangers juniors in 1936-37. He led the league in total points in 1938, made three all-star teams and paced the Leafs in scoring in most of his years with the team. But somehow his style didn't please Toronto fans, and they reacted with boos and jeers.

For Toronto, the substitution of Don Metz and Dickens for Drillon and McDonald proved brilliant strategy: the Leafs won the fourth game, though not without a cliff-hanger of a struggle.

The Red Wings, playing before a crowd of 13,694, an Olympia attendance record up to that date, skated confidently to a 2-0 lead in the second period on goals by Mud Bruneteau and Sid Abel. But Leafs hung in, and first Davidson, then Billy Taylor scored to even the game heading for the third period.

Carl Liscombe bagged a goal on a 35-foot shot at the beginning of the period. But still the Leafs refused to cave in, and Apps quickly brought the team back to a tie, 3-3. Toronto caught new fire with their captain's score, and at 12:45, the season's money player, Nick Metz, floated across the Detroit zone from left wing and drilled a shot past Mowers: 4-3.

In the fifth game, the Red

HAP DAY

Wings fell apart. Day made one more change in his lineup, substituting 19-year-old Gaye Stewart for Hank Goldup (thus completing a unique progression for Stewart, from junior to senior to minor-pro to Stanley Cup competitor all in a single season), and Toronto skated all over Detroit. The game ended 9-3.

In front of their home crowd in the Olympia, the Wings returned to the ferocious, free-skating hockey that had won them the first three games of the series. They sailed into the Toronto zone in waves in the first period, peppering Turk Broda with a constant sniper-fire of shots.

They did everything in winning style, everything except score. Broda was brilliant. He frustrated the Wings and he frustrated the Wing fans. The Detroit players could do nothing with him.

The fans could — they hurled everything at Broda from programs and rubbers to a dead fish. But they couldn't upset Turk, and it was his miraculous play in the first period that steadied the Leafs and turned the course of the game.

The Leafs headed back to Toronto for the seventh game with a 3-0 win and the series tied 3-3.

It was April 18, 1942, and 16,240 fans jammed Maple Leaf Gardens to watch the Leafs complete their unprecedented comeback: three losses in the first three games and, still, a Stanley Cup.

TURK BRODA

But first came mild disappointment. Detroit scored first, a goal in the second period that put them ahead entering the third, 1-0. The minutes swept by on the big Gardens clock and the Leafs couldn't sustain any kind of drive. Their shots at the Detroit goal seemed routine and Mowers blocked them with casual ease.

Sweeney Shriner finally broke Toronto out of its spell. He worked himself loose in front of the Detroit net at 7:47 of the third, feinted, shifted and fired.

The score was 1-1, and the Leafs caught fire. Their play took on a new spirit, and they bombarded the Detroit goal. Pete Langelle and Johnny McCreedy stormed into the Detroit end on one rush.

McCreedy fired directly at Mowers. Mowers stopped it and slid out of his net. The puck bounced off his pads and rebounded to Langelle. Mowers squatted on his knees to the side of the goal. Most of the net stood empty. Langelle shot. It was, for him, a practised, reflex move. And he scored.

Shriner scored his second goal of the night later in the period. The game ended 3-1, and Maple Leaf Gardens turned into Times Square on New Year's Eve. The Leafs had pulled off a Stanley Cup victory that no other team had ever before managed and that no team has matched from 1942 to this date.

Civilian Director Startles RCMP Brass

OTTAWA (CP) — The RCMP was shaken Wednesday as Prime Minister Trudeau appointed diplomat John Kennett Starnes to head its security and intelligence directorate.

At the same time, Mr. Trudeau appointed high-powered RCMP undercover man William Leonard Higgitt as commissioner of the 8,500-man federal force.

Commissioner Higgitt spent his first day as RCMP chief at home with the flu.

Meanwhile, retiring commissioner Malcolm Lindsay was briefing startled RCMP officers in Regina on the changes.

"The whole thing was rather sudden," Mr. Lindsay said in an interview late Wednesday.

"He's worked with us for a long time," he said of Mr. Starnes, an experienced intelligence man in external affairs.

The outgoing commissioner didn't feel the force would reject Mr. Starnes as an "outsider."

" . . . Not after I explained his personality," he said. "He was a very personable and knowledgeable contact."

An external affairs associate described Mr. Starnes as an aggressive administrator and "an iron fist in a very smooth glove."

DELAYED RETIREMENT

Mr. Lindsay, 60, was eligible for retirement in June after 35 years' service but was asked by the government to stay on for several months.

The RCMP security and intelligence wing took a beating in last year's royal commission report on security.

The royal commission proposed that it be replaced by a civilian security agency.

The report said the requirements of police and security work are different and RCMP recruiting and training scared off university graduates needed in intelligence work.

Prime Minister Trudeau, in making the report public in June, rejected its proposal for a civilian agency but promised efforts to make the security directorate "a distinct and identifiable element" within the RCMP.

It would continue to draw on the RCMP for personnel and share administrative, research, documentation and other services with the force.

However, it would also become "increasingly separate in structure and civilian in nature." New, flexible policies in recruiting and training would be introduced.

PM CONFIDENT

In announcing the Higgitt appointment, Mr. Trudeau expressed the confidence that the new commissioner would carry out his job "in full awareness of the changing needs of the force."

Mr. Higgitt and Mr. Starnes each are 51. The new commissioner, a native of Anerley, Sask., who joined at 19, has spent most of his 32 years on the RCMP in security work.

He became director of security and intelligence in 1967 and was singled out then as a future commissioner.

Mr. Starnes, who speaks English, French, German and some Arabic, has been ambassador to West Germany, the United Arab Republic and the Sudan.

Son of a wealthy Montreal grain broker, he studied at private schools in Canada and Switzerland, then spent a year at the University of Munich studying German in 1936.

When he enlisted in the Black Watch in 1939, his experience in Nazi Germany soon brought a transfer to military intelligence.

By the end of the war, he was in external affairs and his duties since then have included four years leading its security and intelligence liaison division.

Mr. Starnes has been assistant under-secretary of state for external affairs here for two years, helping rewrite the book on foreign regulations.

TAKES EFFECT JAN. 1

His appointment will take effect Jan. 1. He will take orders from Commissioner Higgitt.

The royal commission on security came after a decade of persistent criticism of the RCMP security operation.

Some of the criticism: RCMP personnel investigations are heavy-handed; it has been slow to react to developments such as terrorist activity in Quebec.

The security force numbers at least 500 men—its strength is never divulged—of whom about 40 per cent are civilians now. These include scientists and political authorities at the top levels. It recruits its regulars from RCMP ranks after about three years of service.

Despite its criticisms, the royal commission had to admit that it is hard to assess the effectiveness of a security service and that the careful RCMP appeared to have made few mistakes in the past.

However, the commission said, the force seemed "reluctant to take desirable initiatives;" had cut itself off from university graduates by "disincentives;" and appeared incapable of improvement in personnel investigations.

Bus Clock Runs —Backwards

NOTTINGHAM, England (UPI) — The clock at the bus station has confused many passengers and drivers lately — it has been running backwards.

It loses two hours every 60 minutes, so is always wrong except for the six times a day it catches up with itself.

Bus company officials promised to have it fixed soon.

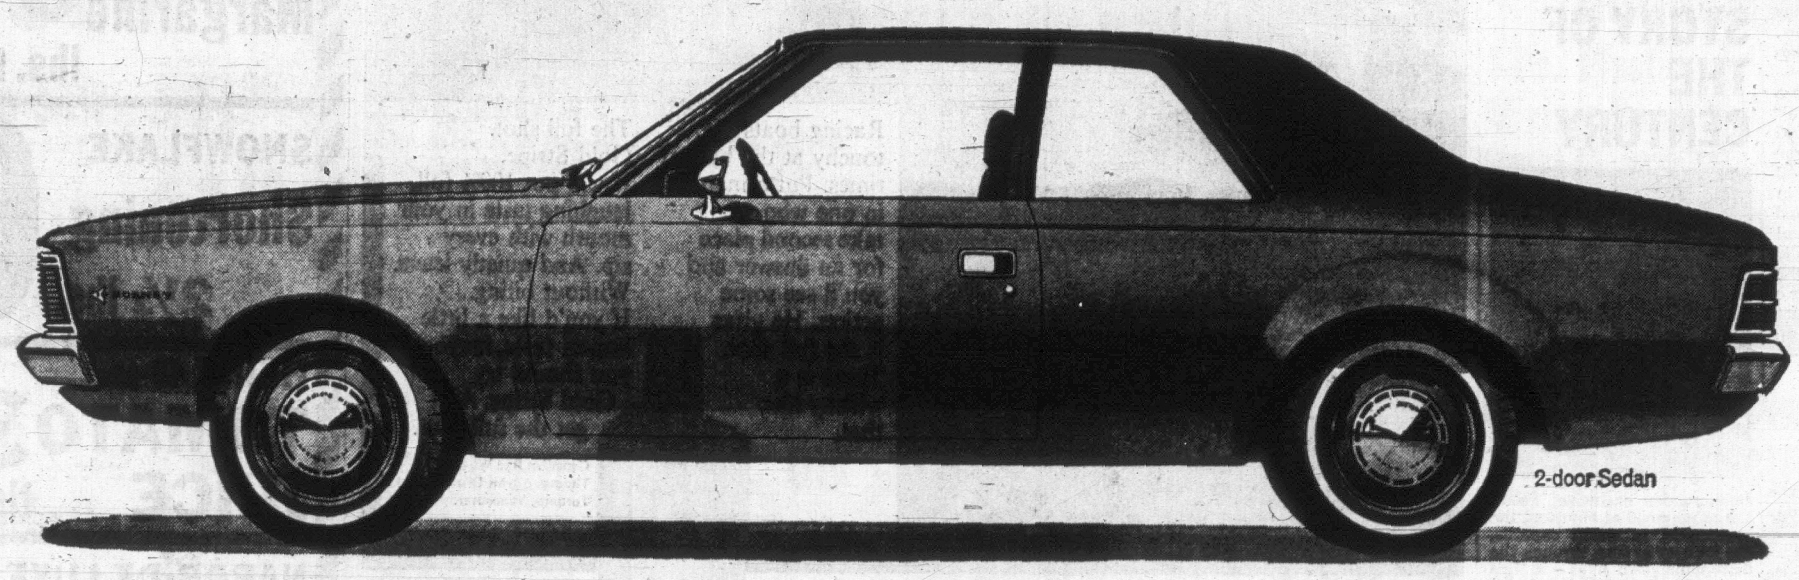

JUST LIKE TREASON TO LIBRARIANS

CALGARY (CP) — It's almost like treason in the eyes of his fellow librarians, but W. R. Castell, director of the public library, thinks it will be "something special for patrons."

Mr. Castell has approved a pop reading section for the library. Between 1,500 and 2,000 new books will be placed in this section without any delay for cataloguing and classifying.

He said it's like treason to other librarians to hear of books being put into circulation without being classified. "The library profession is very conservative," he said.

Introducing the Hornets.

If you thought American Motors was going to introduce a see-one-and-you've-seen-'em-all kind of car, think again.

Hornet is available in as many combinations as you've got imagination.

It's the small car for people who like small cars.

And while the base price is definitely not expensive, Hornet was not designed to be cheap transportation.

A good close-up look at the basic 2-door model will verify this. The standard engine is a big 128 hp six. The Javelin—influenced styling is engineered over a 108 in. wheelbase for a smooth, stable ride. The passenger compartment accommodates 5 in absolute comfort. So the base price gives you a fine automobile. From there you can move into things like 4 doors. A vinyl roof. A 210 hp V-8. An automatic transmission. Power brakes. Power steering. Reclining seats. Even air-conditioning. You can custom-tailor Hornet to suit yourself, to give yourself the kind of power you want. The kind of comfort you want. The kind of luxury you want. It's for people who like small cars, but don't want to pay more than they would for the cheap cars.

4-door SST

from $2374.

"All prices are based on manufacturer's suggested retail factory delivered prices, including federal sales taxes. Optional equipment and transportation charges extra."

GOVERNMENT OFFICIAL'S WARNING

'America Sinking in Sea of Garbage'

By SPENCER RICH

WASHINGTON (WP) — The United States is threatened by a mounting pile of old newspapers, garbage, discarded autos and tires, used soda bottles and other trash, Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Robert Finch told a senate subcommittee Tuesday.

Finch said the junk produced by an industrial society was fouling the nation's rivers, polluting the air, clogging the cities, spreading disease and destroying the beauty of the environment.

"Last year Americans discarded . . . 48 billion cans and 26 billion bottles," said the secretary. "We discarded 100 million automobile tires, and reclaimed only 30 per cent . . . we are spewing out annually some 2 billion tons of agricultural wastes and more than a billion tons of mineral wastes."

Diseases Linked

The problem of solid wastes is reaching crisis proportions, Finch said, because municipalities and private sources — despite spending $4.5 billion a year on disposal — aren't doing a good job of getting rid of trash and garbage. For example, 80 per cent of all municipal wastes is burned in open dumps, and it was found that "94 per cent of all land disposal operations (of solid wastes) and 75 per cent of the municipal incinerators are unsatisfactory from the point of view of public health, efficiency of operation or protection of natural resources."

Finch said at least 22 human diseases are linked to solid waste disposal problems, including hepatitis and encephalitis; hospital wastes (now 19 pounds a day per patient) has an enormous potential for harm, and the bulk of some 14,000 persons suffering rat bites in 1968 lived in areas where inadequate disposal of waste materials "offered food and harborage to these pests."

Opposes Grant

Despite painting the junk-disposal problem as one of growing crisis, Finch clashed sharply with subcommittee chairman Edmund S. Muskie (D—Maine) over Muskie's bill to provide federal grants reaching $236 million annually by 1974 to help localities plan and build waste-disposal systems.

Finch opposed the grants, citing budgetary difficulties, lack of knowledge as to the kinds of facilities to build, and an administration preference for a user-charge or special tax approach that he said would put the burden of financing cleanup on those producing the materials which eventually became waste.

For example, he indicated, he might favor imposing a special excise tax on sales of cars to be used to pay for disposal of old cars.

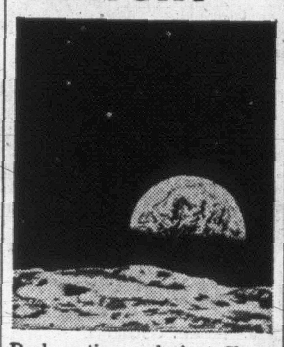

An aide said the president's new cabinet-level Environmental Quality Council was studing various user-charge proposals of this type and was expected to develop a set of policy options by the end of the year. Finch added that developing ways to reuse waste materials, or to profitably use waste heat from the burning of trash, was a major avenue being pursued by HEW.

Minister Asks Ferry Changes

NANAIMO (CP) — Highways Minister Wesley Black Tuesday asked Mayor Frank Ney of Nanaimo to send him a detailed report on suggestions to improve ferry service between Horseshoe Bay and Nanaimo.

Ney said the minister "seemed most sympathetic to a plea for a covered walkway and a suitable waiting room for ferry patrons" at all stops.

When You're Poor Enough You Shoplift to Survive

They Tell Ministers How It Is . . . Bleak

By REG SILVESTER

The four welfare ministers were mostly silent. Ray Speaker of Alberta looked bored. Cy MacDonald of Saskatchewan was interested. Norbert Theriault of New Brunswick smiled.

John Munro of Canada smoked.

Dan Campbell of British Columbia wasn't there.

Munro thought the panel discussion Wednesday night with some of the poor people of Victoria was good, "but the time for welfare ministers and governments to react is other than here."

How do you survive on welfare? an unidentified woman was asked.

"I'm a shoplifter. I had to become one. I steal all my clothes, all my children's clothes and almost all my food. I hope and pray to God I don't get caught."

The welfare ministers were silent. The audience nervously laughed.

Reg Clarkson, executive secretary of the Low Income Group, handled the meeting at the YMCA like a ringmaster, asking questions, interpreting answers, addressing the ministers by their first names, and continually avoiding putting them on the spot.

Munro and the Poor: Reactions Mixed

'We Need Action, Soon' Munro Tells Provinces At Ministers' Conference

He continued the questioning.

"I had one meal in my house last month and I stole it from a supermarket. I have exactly $1.60 a month left after rent and bills."

This morning Munro spoke at the opening of a federal-provincial conference of welfare ministers at the Legislative Buildings. He said pressure for change is growing. Welfare recipients and other minorities are forming groups with political objectives.

Wednesday night they told John Munro:

● "I'm afraid of the coldness the winter's bringing."

● "My son is afraid to go to school Monday mornings. He has physical education classes and we can't afford to buy him running shoes."

● "I'll be damned if I'll stop fighting. I'll either find a sugar daddy or a new man or do a darn good job on my own."

● "I don't have any outside life. I'm sick. Sometimes I'd like to die."

● "They wanted to send me back to Saskatchewan. I just told them I wouldn't go back because it's too cold. I said I'd sit in the middle of the street if I had to."

In his speech to the welfare ministers, Munro listed four alternatives. Continue as is. Cut back on low return projects. Increase rates with present structure. Or restructure the entire system.

"I am sure you will share my concern about the possibility that those who are unable to provide adequately for their own support should not have some protection against the added costs of living that affect all members of society," he said.

"We cannot waste any more time studying the perhipheries of the problem. We need action, and soon."

At the Y, Walter Olszewski, president of the Low Income Group, was more urgent.

"Now is the time to do it. If you don't start giving us more, your cities are going to be burned down.

"And so help me God, I'll be lighting the match."

A man stood up in the audience, identifying himself as a former welfare administrator.

"The whole system is based on this agrarian fear that the unworthy poor will get away with something."

A lot of discretion lies with the civil service hierarchy, and their tendency is to deny any application that has the slightest fault, he said.

And the ministers were told:

● "My social worker had a job for me—living common law with a man who had a stroke. I went down and looked at the job and it wasn't any good."

● "My social worker told me I was young enough to go out and find a man to buy the things we needed. A girl friend of mine had the same experience."

● "I wanted to sell cosmetics. I asked for a larger clothing allowance to buy a new dress so I could put my brightest foot forward. (Request refused.) If I want out (of welfare) you have to give me a shove."

Some excerpts from Munro's speech this morning:

"Too many people spend too much of their budget on the absolute raw necessities of food and shelter, with nothing left over to enable them to get out of their present situation."

"This is important; the present set-up has been accused, with a good deal of justice, of acting as an agent of continued dependency and deprivation."

"The ultimate objective is easily stated: the elimination of the welfare roles if possible, with every family supported by a breadwinner in a decently paying job."

Of the "welfare roles" at the Y:

A six-year-old girl is so used to macaroni and potatoes that on the few occasions meat is available, she doesn't like it.

Teen-aged children can't get enough money even to take a bus down town. They drop out of school early to earn money to be able to do the same things their friends do. They can't stand to hear "we can't afford it" any more.

Children can't join organizations. They don't have enough money for dues or uniforms. No extra cash for sports equipment. They don't have the price of admission to a dance or a movie.

Young children would like to see museums or marinas. "We can't afford it."

A high school girl gets dressed down by her principal for being unable to bring money for supplies. "You welfare people think you can get away with anything," he tells her.

Munro: "I am confident they (the Canadian people) will enthusiastically back reforms which reduce or eliminate the instance of a continuing cycle of poverty, passed down from generation to generation because of bad housing, inadequate diets, insufficient care, bad health, substandard schools, the necessity to supplement meagre family income, and other factors which have led to improper education and a high early dropout rate by children of the poor."

It's important that the people who are going to "enthusiastically" support reform understand the plight of the poor. "The public has a right to know more about the problem and its potential solutions. The more they do know, the more confident I am that we will be able to present major changes in the system and obtain general public support for them," he said today.

A woman in the audience stood up Wednesday night. "There's plenty in this country for everyone to have a good standard of living. If we as the working public aren't sympathetic to these people, we're shovelling our own grave."

And a woman on welfare says she has never had a new dress or coat or shoes. She didn't have a winter coat.

The fuel allowance keeps a house warm for four months. It's cold eight.

Window frames fall apart in "a house that should be condemned."

A woman gets on the wrong side of her social worker because she appealed a ruling that she get welfare support for only seven of her 12 children. How did she know she could appeal? The worker is suspicious.

'Shovelling Own Graves' If Working Public Keeps Current Attitude to Poor

Another gets no cheque because there's a rumor her husband is supporting her. "With welfare, any rumor is true, and you're guilty until proven innocent."

Theriault of New Brunswick is "delighted" to realize other provinces have troubles.

MacDonald of Saskatchewan said there are good and bad social workers.

Speaker of Alberta said things could be improved.

Munro of Canada said this morning: "The out groups of our society do not just suffer objectively from the lack of the means to make a decent living. But they also suffer subjectively, from a sense of isolation and powerlessness with regard even to those things which touch their lives most intimately."

"What we now need is to establish channels, formal and informal, active and passive, quiet and noisy, to the representatives of this lonely crowd."

"How can we help them if we don't even know them?"

● "So I said to my social worker, look buddy, if it wasn't for me, you'd be out of a job."

Jets Roar Over Parade Opening RCAF Convention

APPOINTMENT of John A. Hamilton as acting advertising director of Victoria Press Limited is announced by W. A. Irwin, the company's vice-president. H. L. Alexander, the present advertising director and assistant general manager, will assume responsibility for co-ordinating the planning of the company's projected new building on property immediately to the south of the existing premises. Hamilton was formerly manager of the Toronto advertising office of F.P. Publications, representing the Winnipeg Free Press, Ottawa Journal, Calgary Albertan, Lethbridge Herald, The Daily Colonist, Victoria Daily Times and the Free Press Weekly.

A jet flypast and a parade through downtown Victoria to the Cenotaph highlighted opening ceremonies of the 19th annual national convention of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association today.

Some 400 delegates from 75 Canadian wings and three situated in the San Francisco area are attending the Empress Hotel meeting.

This is the first time the convention has been held in Victoria.

Ceremonies this morning began with a colorful parade of flags, the bearers marching to the music of the Canadian Forces Naden Band.

Among the guests were Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and Mayor Hugh Stephen.

Air Marshal Wilfrid Curtis of Toronto, national grand president, stressed the need for increased membership in order to play an effective role. There are 10,500 members.

National president Alex M. Jardine of Victoria described the association's support of air cadets as one of its most important commitments.

★ ★ ★

He also emphasized the need for more members, stating the group's impact on the federal government's policies for veterans and the future of Canadian aviation would be strengthened by more representation.

The (428) Peterborough Wing was awarded the Air Marshal Curtis award for the wing with more than 150 members obtaining the most members during the past year.

Jardine announced the association's support of the Royal Canadian Air Force memorial project, planned for the base at Trenton, Ont.

To cost $3½ million dollars, the memorial will take the form of a chapel and activity complex which will be open to servicemen, their dependents and community groups.

Plans and a model of the complex were unveiled at the base Sunday by Defence Minister Leo Cadieux.

Jardine said the project is hoped to be completed by Battle of Britain Sunday in 1971.

The meeting ends Saturday.

Non-Property Voters Increase Slightly

Only a slight increase was reported today by the four main municipalities in non-property owning voters.

The combined total for Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt this year is 3,848 persons compared with 3,729 over last year, an increase of 119.

Property owners automatically go on the municipal voters list. Non-property owners must register or re-confirm in order to be eligible. The deadline for registration was Tuesday afternoon.

Victoria has 2,525 resident and tenant voters this year, an increase of two over 1968. Oak Bay was second with 730 persons this year, an increase of five.

Saanich recorded the biggest increase—up 125 persons to 453. Esquimalt dropped 13 to 140.

Figures for the number of property-owning voters have not been completed.

But 1968, there were 29,455 property-owning voters in Saanich, 18,119 in Victoria, 8,506 in Oak Bay and 4,287 in Esquimalt.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you give me a count of the actual number of seats taken by each party in the recent West German elections? L.M.

A. There are 496 seats in the Bundestag. Of these, the Social Democrats won 224, the Free Democrats received 30 and the Christian Democrats, 242.

Building Rockets Ahead On Apartment Bonanza

Riding a crest of apartment construction, southern Vancouver Island building continues to boom, undeterred by high interest rates and inflation.

Permits worth $59.2 million have been issued in the first nine months in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Sidney, Esquimalt and North Saanich.

This is up $20 million over the same period last year.

Victoria city continued to set the pace, with permits worth $29.2 million this year, up almost $10 million over the same period last year.

Apartments provided the big boost—30 were started to provide a total of 1,540 suites at a total cost of $13.6 million.

Saanich was second with this year's permits totalling $18.3 million, up $6 million on last year's first nine-month period.

OAK BAY DOUBLE

Apartment and educational construction helped the increase with house construction falling off. There were 312 houses and duplexes worth $6.6. million this year compared with 365 worth $7.1 million in the same period last year.

Oak Bay, boosted by the apartment boom as well as educational buildings, more than doubled its activity—to $5.7 million from $2.1 million in the first nine months of 1968.

Other areas, last year's corresponding figures in brackets: Sidney $2.7 million (2.2 million); Esquimalt $2.1 million ($1.5 million); North Saanich $1.5 million ($1 million).

Up-to-date figures were not available from Central Saanich municipality and the unorganized areas of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin.

FORCES HIT APPEAL GOAL IN 23 DAYS

Canadian Armed Forces in the Greater Victoria Area wasted no time in meeting their quota for this year's United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal.

In 23 days $21,000 was raised in a joint effort by army, navy, and air force personnel.

Even crews of destroyer-escorts St. Croix, Qu'Appelle and Saskatchewan, en route to Australia, were able to donate their full quota, sending it back to Victoria by mail.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ON THE DAY WE arrived in Victoria with a pair of Toronto-born children, we fell violently in love with the house we still occupy. What we didn't realize when we signed the papers, however, was that we were acquiring much more than the makings of a home.

We also inherited a set of neighbors who were committed to living life on their own terms. They made no attempt to keep up with the Joneses. The Joneses, if they were so minded, could adapt to them.

One of these neighbors was Mrs. Mac. I will not wish peace to her gallant spirit, because a state of nirvana would bore that extraordinary woman.

★

She was fond of referring to herself as an aged lady, but her eyes, her manner and her carriage gave that claim the lie. Mrs. Mac was insufferably arrogant, opinionated in the extreme, and fierce as a hawk. But she became our good friend, and remained so until she died.

We had heard of her in The Village, which I actually heard someone call Cadboro Bay shopping centre the other day. Mrs. Mac, we gathered, was something of a legend there . . . a grand dame imperious as she was wiful. So we carefully avoided intruding on her, and told our children that they must on no account cross the unfenced property line into her territory.

★

But we were uneasily aware of her presence behind the planted laurel and self-sprung underbrush that made a division between properties.

Sometimes we heard her issuing orders to her Chinese houseboy, Sam, or arguing with her twice-a-week gardener, Leong Foon. Then one day we glimpsed her through a break in the screen. She was smiling, not at us, but at our children where they played with considerable noise and vigor on our summer-parched back lawn.

A week or so later, Mrs. Mac parted the greenery and stepped with great dignity upon our turf.

She introduced herself, gracefully and with the charm that was hers to summon when she was so minded.

Would we come to tea one day? And would we tell our children that they could play in her garden and visit her in her house whenever they wished?

Lucky kids! They didn't know it at the time, but they had come into possession of a supplementary grandmother who gave, and was to receive, affection and unwavering loyalty.

As for Win and me, we had launched on a friendship that endured all gales for some very good years.

In time, I learned to predict those tempests with reasonable certainty. Mrs. Mac, even with her old-age pension achieved, could endure only so much calm.

But the first encounter took me by surprise.

★

I was clipping lawn edges when she issued her now-familiar summons: a "Hoo-hoo" like a melodious owl call.

"Bill," she said, "I have been wondering about that tree."

The fir in question, big and old, with a forked top of the sort that oldtime loggers called a school-ma'rm, straddled the property line well down the slope.

"It worries me," said Mrs. Mac.

She sketched a gesture of a tree toppling. "If it falls, it will strike my roof."

★

"Impossible," I told her. "But if you're worried, I'll pace the distance out."

"I'm going to have it cut down," she said. And in a mock-generous concession, "Naturally, we'll share the firewood."

The tree still stands. Mrs. Mac loved it, and would have interposed her person between it and destruction. What she wanted, and all she wanted, was a brannigan to stir up the too-languid air.

"You shouldn't have spoken to her like that," my gentle wife chided later.

"Yeah," I agreed, feeling like a dog. "After all, she's old and alone in that big house. Do you think I should go over and patch things up?"

About then, the goose-necked wall phone with which we communicated at that time, jangled twice. It was Mrs. Mac, merry and bright, suggesting a drink before dinner.

Through the years, and without so much as nicking friendship, we tangled on a diversity of subjects. Public school against private school. Should children sit at table with their elders. Identity of a songbird which we scared off its twig with our intemperate quarrel.

But there were other times. I can remember a lavish Christmas at Mrs. Mac's house, and another at ours when she listened to carol records.

★

She sat entranced as a child, our children sharing a hassock beside her. When Mahalia Jackson sang the Cherry Tree Ballad in her rich voice, the grand lady wept.

We were away on a holiday when Mrs. Mac died. Another neighbor broke the news, and we knew that something good had been removed from our lives.

She was perverse and kind, arbitrary and gentle. We missed her for a long time, and our children for longer.

Yule Log Recipe Requested by Reader

By PENNY SAVER

It all began when a reader wrote the paper asking for the recipe for yule logs.

Christmas, she pointed out, is approaching much more quickly than we think and since these rolled newspaper logs take over a month to prepare, it is not too early to start dunking and drying.

After a bit of research, I have assembled three recipes for obtaining colored flames, two of which are fairly quick and easy and might be fun for Halloween fires as well.

YULE LOGS

Dissolve 2 pounds of bluestone and 1 pound of coarse salt in 1 gallon of hot water.

Roll newspapers tightly and tie securely in several places to form the logs.

Place these newspaper logs in a crock with the chemical solution and soak for 10 days.

Let the logs hang to dry for three weeks before wrapping in fancy paper and storing until they are needed for the fire.

If chemicals are added to shellac and the mixture painted onto small bits of wood or mixed in with sawdust, the wood will give colored flames when added to the fire.

To get violet flames, use potassium chlorate; yellow, potassium nitrate; orange, calcium chloride; red, strontium nitrate; apple green, barium nitrate; emerald green, copper nitrate; green, borax, and purple, lithium choride.

These recipes originated with the home economists at the old B.C. Electric Company.

When I was young my mother used to make little waxen cup cakes that were pushed into the fire and burned with vari-colored flames. Since they were always burned, we called them King Alfred's Cakes, in honor of that negligent cook.

Please note, the chemicals used are potentially explosive. When mixing the chemicals DO NOT POUND THEM! And make sure the cakes are burned in a fireplace or under parental supervision in a bonfire.

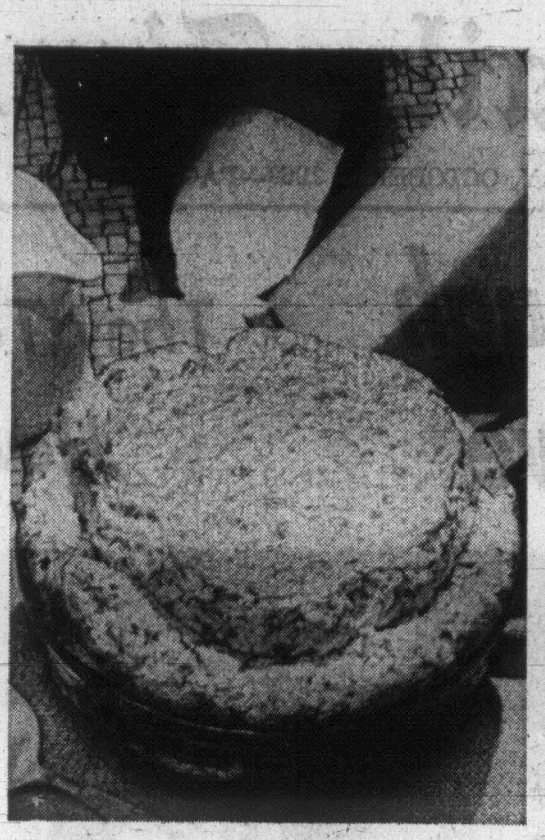

Ingredients are 3 pounds bluestone, 3 pounds coarse salt, 1 ounce strontium nitrate, one ounce calcium nitrate, 1 ounce potassium nitrate and 1 ounce borax.

You will also need a muffin pan, lots of paper muffin cups and melted wax, either from old candles or packaged wax.

For safety's sake again, please remember to melt the wax over hot water NOT a direct flame. Wax will ignite at too high a temperature.

Mix the chemicals together in a cardboard box, remembering to be gentle.

Line the muffin pan with paper cups and place 2 tablespoons of the chemical mixture in each. Fill with melted wax and let them cool.

Traditional spoon bread becomes a main course dish when lots of cheese and corned beef are added to the basic recipe. (Canadian Dairy Foods Service Bureau Photo).

Corn Bread Becomes Main Dish

Corn is North America's great contribution to cereal foods.

For the early settlers, wheat was a luxury and corn became their principle grain. After much experimentation, they learned to use it in many ways.

Spoon bread goes back to the early days of colonization.

The Indians cooked their cornmeal in pots and the settlers adopted this method. Remembering the quickbreads they had made at home, however, the colonists added milk and eggs and baked it in the oven.

They then served it from the casserole with salt, pepper and lots of butter.

Cheesy Beef Spoon Bread is a delicious main course variation of this traditional dish.

Cottage Corn Bread is almost a convenience dish, using a corn muffin mix and canned corns. A sort of custardy batter bread, it goes well with hot or cold roasted meats.

CHEESY BEEF SPOON BREAD

One cup corn meal; 1½ cups water; 2 cups (½ pound) shredded cheddar cheese; ¼ cup soft butter; 1 tbsp. chopped chives; ¼ tbsp salt; ¼ tsp. garlic salt, ½ tsp. baking soda; 1 cup buttermilk; 3 eggs, separated; ½ (7-ounce) can corn beef, flaked; melted butter.

Butter a 2-quart souffle dish. Preheat oven to 325 degrees F. In a large saucepan combine corn meal and water; cook stirring constantly until thickened. Remove from heat and add cheese, butter, chopped chives, solt, garlic salt and baking soda; stir until cheese is melted. Gradually add buttermilk. Beat egg yolks well and stir into corn meal mixture; stir in corn beef. Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry, fold in carefully. Pour into prepared souffle dish and bake in preheated oven about 1 hour. Spoon into dishes and serve with melted butter. (Serves eight).

COTTAGE CORN BREAD

One-half cup butter, ½ cup finely-chopped onion; ¼ cup chopped green pepper; 1 (14-ounce) package corn muffin mix; 1 (12-ounce) can whole kernel corn, undrained; 1 (10-ounce) can cream style corn; ¼ cup chopped pimiento; 3 eggs, beaten; ½ pint dairy sour cream; 1 cup cottage cheese.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees F. Butter a 9-inch square baking dish. In a saucepan melt butter. Add onion and green pepper; cook over low heat until tender. Combine corn muffin mix, kernel corn, cream style corn, pimiento, eggs and onion mixture. Turn into prepared baking dish. Combine sour cream and cottage cheese. Spread over corn mixture. Bake in preheated oven 40 to 45 minutes, or until set. (Serves eight.)

DEAR ABBY . . .

Time to Go

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I fight all the time. I have begged him to see a marriage counselor with me, but he refuses saying he doesn't need anybody to tell him now to run his life. We have three kiddies or I would have left him long ago.

I have spoken to my pastor, a marriage counselor, a lawyer, my family doctor and I even went to a psychiatrist, thinking maybe it was my fault. They all told me they couldn't help me unless my husband came in. And if he refuses to come in, I should leave him.

I would like your opinion, and the opinion of some of your readers who may have had the same experience. Is it better to raise children in a home where there is no love, or in a home where there is no father?—Needs to know.

DEAR NEEDS: Some misguided wives who cling to an impossible marriage "for the sake of the children" should leave for that reason. If you have really tried, and I believe you have, I can't give you any better advice than the others.

DEAR ABBY: I am a transplanted Texan, having lived most of my life in Colorado. I like Texas, and wouldn't mind spending the rest of my life here, but I work for a company with offices spread all over the country and I have no guarantee that I won't be transferred.

I met a very nice girl here and the subject of marriage came up. She said she would marry me tomorrow if (and here is where the problem comes in) I promised her we would never move out of Texas.

Abby, I told her I couldn't make her that kind of promise on account of my job, and she said, yes, I could. I could refuse to leave Texas, or take a job with another company if they tried to transfer me.

I've got a lot of seniority built up with this company, and I sure wouldn't want to lose it, but I really do like this little girl and don't know what to do. Whay do you say? — Jimmy.

DEAR JIMMY: I say keep looking. And don't stop until you find a girl who will gladly go whither thou goest.

CONFIDENTIAL TO LOUISE: Place a piece of raw beefsteak over your eye, then place a three-inch strip of adhesive tape over your mouth.

Everybody has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply write to Abby, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069, and enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Junior Artists Win Awards

Six-year-old Colleen Varkonja pointed to her classmates' paintings on the wall.

"We figure them out by looking around us," she commented, stepping closer to re-examine her own work. It was a splash of vibrant color and braided hair ribbons on a rectangular background.

Her playmate, Lisa Madill, also six, commented, "I looked at the moon."

The theme of her painting was witches and broomsticks done in sombre, dark colors.

Their work, and the paintings of four other students done in their kindergarten class last year, captured the Canadian National Exhibition 1969 Winning School Award for Monterey Elementary School.

The art, adorned with the purple and gold national award ribbons, is now on display on the foyer of the Victoria school board's Paul Building.

Teacher Gwen Futselaar said the school chose work from 60 students and submitted selected pieces in two kindergarten classifications: picture making and topics of fantasy.

"Our students' work was chosen on the basis of originality and artistic merit," said Mrs. Futselaar.

Five entries won first prizes and one was given honorable mention.

The children, all six years, are Robyn Else, Karen Macdonald, David Ravenhill, Lisa Madill, Colleen Varkonja and Maureen Grunewald. The first five are now in Grade One at Monterey.

"This art is the sort of thing we do all the time at Monterey," said Mrs. Futselaar. "Pure creative design, picture making and even creative drama are part of the curriculum.

"But, you know, creativity does not come out of a vacuum," she stressed. "We have to encourage them."

Colleen Varkonja, left, and Lisa Madill admire their award-winning paintings, on display in the school board buildings. Colleen's work is at the top and Lisa's is the bottom one. Centre drawing is by Maureen Grundewald. They attend Monterey Elementary School. (Robin Clarke Photo).

By ED GOULD

It seems most women today collect something.

Usually they collect something interesting, if impractical, like antiques or ornamental glass hats.

My wife is a scrap collector. She saves a dill pickle here, a spoonful of peas there, a forkful of spaghetti somewhere else. I know she has good intentions about making use of these leftovers but the road to the poorhouse is paved with leftovers and they always get thrown out.

That is, after they've rotted and can be disposed of with a clear conscience. After all, a good scrap collector doesn't like to waste anything.

Here's this week's lineup: Eight lima beans (in butter), a strawberry and a half (semi-frozen), three beets (home-preserved), a spoonful of sauerkraut (imported) and one oyster (fried). See any possibilities there?

And now, to make matters worse, my wife's begun collecting scraps before they even get to the table.

A carrot is left in the serving dish, a leaf of lettuce in the salad bowl, a raspberry stranded in the tin.

"I have a feeling someone may be coming to dinner," she explains.

"Which year?" I say.

And that is when I invented The Man. The Man Who Never Came to Dinner. Whenever my wife went to put a little gravy aside or to save a couple of onion rings, I would say, "Are you saving that for The Man?"

She took it very well. Too well, in fact. Soon she took up the cry herself.

"Don't eat that blueberry pie in the cupboard. I'm saving it for The Man."

It got so The Man was eating better than I was.

Then my wife started to hit back. When it comes to inserting the needle or delivering a karate chop to the ego, my wife has it all over me.

Now, whenever I look askance at the leftover pile, she counters with something like this: "The hall door is still sticking and the new tube you were going to put in the stereo is still on the mantlepiece. Will you do it, or shall I call The Man?" The Man, in this case, charges upwards of six dollars an hour.

So that's why The Man never comes to dinner at our house. And unless he wants to eat leftovers in payment for odd jobs, he never will!

New Toronto Centre Helps Women Addicts, Alcoholics

TORONTO (CP) — Peggy Ann Walpole left her career as a registered nurse 4½ years ago to go "down where the action is" in her personal campaign to salvage Toronto's most helpless female failures.

This fall, she saw her initial $20 investment in the lives of women drug addicts, alcoholics and sex perverts turned into a $65,000 centre for wayward women—Street Haven—with the lieutenant-governor of Ontario as honorary patron.

She says there can be no real success in her work, citing two examples to illustrate the aims of Street Haven—an ex-lesbian who left the shelter to live with a man, and a woman who used to go on 30-day drinking sprees but now limits herself to two-day drunks.

Street Haven was intentionally located in its 103-year-old, 11-room permanent home, officially opened in September, as close as possible to the downtown area "where the drug addicts hang out."

Miss Walpole opened her first Street Haven in 1965 in an empty former beverage room in the same area.

The women most often found in Street Haven are drug addicts and alcoholics around 40 — "in terrible shape medically"—who don't want help and don't ask for it.

These are the ones Peggy Walpole met at hospitals as a student nurse and a registered nurse and who she felt were not being helped because nobody would "come down to their level."

She deals with few teenagers. "They're not ready to give up the drugs and come to the haven."

"The do-gooder is out because here there's no success, no sense of accomplishment and constant disappointment."

Just a few days before the new quarters were opened, two 40-year-old women from Street Haven died after taking what were suspected to be overdoses of heroin cut with strychnine.

"Hardly a day goes by that we don't go to a hospital with one of them" Miss Walpole says.

THE ALUMNAE

"The proceeds? Why, I believe they're to go toward financing our next bazaar."

Program to Train Aides

CALGARY (CP) — Mrs. Ethel Wilson, only woman MLA in Alberta and minister without portfolio, is developing a training program for household aides to help working mothers.

The program, which calls for someone to look after children in the home, would be superior to day care centres, she said.

A young mother taking her children to a day care centre often has to rush to get them there and then to get them home again only to find she has housework to do, Mrs. Wilson said.

"It's often too much of a strain and the mother doesn't have time to relax and enjoy her family."

A system in which someone is in the home preparing meals, caring for the children and doing the housework is more satisfactory, she said, and would provide employment for young girls with little training.

City to Send Club Workers To Parley

Despite an objection by Ald. Robert Baird, city council's finance committee this morning recommended spending up to $200 to send two detached workers to a Vancouver conference on drug abuse.

Baird emphasized that he was not objecting to the conference, but to council's financing of the trip.

"We have spent a considerable amount of money on these two detached workers," said Baird.

"It is our responsibility to pay their way when they are not city employees?"

"They are doing our work in the city," said Mayor Hugh Stephen.

He said council indirectly pays their salaries through a grant to the Community Council of Greater Victoria. The workers are John Durkin of the YM-YWCA and Charles Tyler of the Boys' Club of Victoria.

Stephen said the police commission is sending Victoria Chief John Gregory to the conference Oct. 15 to 18.

"It's an educational conference at which the latest research into drug addiction will be discussed," he said.

Urban Sprawl Top Problem, Says Planner

VANCOUVER — Preventing urban sprawl and making a regional plan operational are the biggest problems facing the Greater Vancouver Regional District, the distric's new planner, Harry Lash, said Wednesday.

He told a press conference he doesn't expect easy going and anticipates conflicts with local municipal planning departments before functional procedures are worked out.

"We don't want urban sprawl anymore but how do we make this effective for member municipalities," he said.

"We need orderly, compact, economic development to build cities — not a mish-mash of half country, half city."

Lash was a special consultant to the Montreal planning department before he came to Vancouver.

(In Victoria, regional planning — now carried out by the Capital Region Planning Board — is expected to become a function of the Capital Regional District next year.

(The last regional plan in the capital region was drawn in 1959. Study sessions started early this year aimed at laying the groundwork for a new regional plan.

(In addition, Central Saanich has taken steps to curb sprawl development and Saanich municipality will be considering similar moves at its next council meeting).

Scholarship Memorial For Edmunds

A memorial scholarship fund is being set up at Killarney Secondary School, in Vancouver, to honor former principal Jim Edmunds.

A native of Victoria, Edmunds, 55, died in Vancouver a week ago. He was educated at Victoria High, Victoria Normal School and Victoria College and sang in the choirs of Christ Church Cathedral and St. John's Anglican Church.

Mrs. Edmunds, who survives him in Vancouver, is a sister of Victoria teacher Mrs. John Eltringham.

After graduating from the University of British Columbia, Edmunds began teaching at Britannia Mines school in 1934. He joined the Vancouver schools system in 1943, teaching at McBride elementary and Lord Byng secondary.

He was appointed principal of Killarney Secondary in 1962, and made it a leader in the use of school and community centre facilities. He also helped to shape the occupational programs in Vancouver schools.

The Edmunds Scholarship Fund was announced by Dennis Nickerson, acting principal of Killarney school.

Former students, teaching colleagues and friends are being invited to contribute to the fund, which will provide the top citizenship award annually at Killarney.

Canada, New Zealand Marking Captain Cook's Voyage

By J. C. GRAHAM
Canadian Press Correspondent

AUCKLAND, N.Z. (CP) — Canada is taking an active part in celebrations beginning this month to mark the bicentenary of the first Pacific voyage of the great navigator, Captain James Cook.

Three destroyer escorts will represent Canada at major observances and a specially carved totem pole will be presented from Canada to the people of New Zealand.

Canada and New Zealand both hold Cook in high regard for his pioneering explorations on their coasts. He first came to attention for charges he prepared in 1759 during the siege of Quebec, and in following years he was engaged in surveying the coast of Newfoundland.

He did not visit Canada again until the year before his death, but in the meantime he led three great voyages of discovery in the South Pacific.

The first of these led from Tahiti to New Zealand, only sighted once before then—by the Dutch navigator Abel Tasman, who did not land.

Cook became the first white man to land in New Zealand on Oct. 9, 1769, near the present-day city of Gisborne, on the east coast of the North Island. It is this occasion which is being recalled two centuries later in celebrations at the site of the original landing.

Later Cook made a remarkably accurate chart of New Zealand, the basis of all subsequent maps. He continued on to the previously unknown east coast of Australia before returning to England.

The second voyage took him south to the ice of the Antarctic, back to New Zealand, and on through the Pacific where many island groups were charted for the first time.

The final voyage in 1776-1779 led to further island discoveries in the South Pacific, then north to Hawaii, up from there along the Pacific Coast of North America right up to Bering Strait. He was killed in a skirmish, after returning to Hawaii, on Feb. 14, 1779.

It was during this voyage that Cook entered Nootka Sound, on the west coast of Vancouver Island, and became the first white man to land in the region. The Indians there later fashioned the famous Captain Cook totem pole recording the event.

The decision to present to New Zealand for the Cook bicentenary a totem pole based on that fashioned at Nootka Sound is therefore appropriate.

It was made by Douglas Cranmer, a member of the Nimpkish tribe, carver of some notable totem poles, and restorer of many others.

The pole for New Zealand is 23 feet high and weighs two tons. Traditional in design with modern features, it is inspired by the Captain Cook pole but is not a replica.

To mark the completion of the work the information officer from the Canadian High Commission in New Zealand, Lindsay M. Buick-Constable, recently called on the carver at Deep Cove, North Vancouver, where the work was done. He presented Cranmer with a finely carved trinket box made by New Zealand Maoris.

The totem pole was shipped in the destroyer escort St. Croix which with two others, Saskatchewan and Qu'Appelle, left Victoria on Sept. 8.

They are due at Auckland on Saturday and will continue on to Gisborne for the opening of the Cook celebrations. There they will take part in naval ceremonies with warships from Britain, Australa, New Zealand and the United States.

The totem pole will be formally presented to New Zealand on Friday, Oct. 10 by the Canadian High Commissioner in New Zealand, R. M. Macdonnell.

Egypt Reports Attack On Israeli Suez Area

By The Canadian Press

Egypt said today its airborne commandos and frogmen attacked the Israeli-held area south of the Suez canal for the second time in five days, but an Israeli spokesman denied the claim.

The official Middle East news agency reported in Cairo the attack party hit a 22-mile area, from Ras Matrana to Tas Malaab on the estern bank of the Sinai Peninsula 25 miles south of the Suez canal.

The report added that "all units returned safely to base" and said the three-pronged attack "achieved total success and proved the high level of the combat readiness of our troops."

An Israeli spokesman in Tel Aviv said one Egyptian aircraft attacked near Ras Sudar 25 miles south of the Suez canal and struck at "a deserted patch of desert."

"It's just another Egyptian fabrication," said the spokesman. "Notice that this time the Egyptians did not even claim casualies or damage."

Cairo said Egyptian commandos used helicopters for the first time in Suez canal hostilities last Sunday to attack Israeli positions in northern Sinai but Israeli spokesmen denied the attacks took place.

Israeli police announced today an oil pipeline was blown up near Hadera, a city 30 miles north of Tel Aviv.

Earlier, police said Arab saboteurs tried to damage the Tel Aviv-Haifa line with explosives. One bomb blew up but caused no damage and the other was disarmed, police said.

McCarthy Says U.S. Pinkos On B.C. Campus

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia universities are "burdened with pink-tinged professors and draft dodgers from the United States," Minister Without Portfolio Grace McCarthy said Tuesday.

Mrs. McCarthy told the annual meeting of the Tuberculosis and Chest Disabled Veterans' Association certain professors and students from the U.S. are disrupting the whole university system in B.C.

"We have a federal law that allows draft dodgers and these professors into the country and I don't agree with it," she said.

She did not single out any particular university.

Asked if she considered academic dissent legitimate in the political arena, she said "that has absolutely nothing to do with it."

"That academic jazz has nothing to do with the issue. These people have laws in their country and they have to abide by them or go to jail."

Tonight's Top Television Shows

THURSDAY NIGHT — (Color) 10:00, Channels 2, 6. The Last Best West. This is the premiere of a new Canadian Broadcasting Corporation documentary series aimed at reflecting attitudes of Canadians on national and international topics — political, economic and social. Tonight's edition is an examination of the Canadian West which, according to producer-writer Jeanine Locke is "the story not only of Western grievances but of Western accomplishments in its social and economic life." Those interviewed include Prime Minister Trudeau, NDP Premier Ed Schreyer of Manitoba, Saskatchewan Premier Ross Thatcher, B.C. Hydro's Gordon Shrum, UBC scientist Donald Smiley and Saskatchewan wheat farmer Henry Bohrson.

DIAMOND LIL'S (Color) 10:30, Channel 8. Variety music is the main fare on CTV's showcase tonight. Guests include Billy Van and honky-tonk pianist Alex Roberts. Vanda King, the Diamond Lil girl, Tommy Common, the Diamond Lillies and Cutler's Dixieland Band round out the bill.

MOVIE TO WATCH tonight depends upon your taste and your bedtime. The evening's best is one of the better western dramas in the High Noon tradition, 3:10 to Yuma, with Glenn Ford and Van Heflin. Its major drawback is its starting time — 1:05 a.m. on Channel 5. A farmer (Heflin) undertakes the job of bringing a notorious killer (Ford) to Yuma because he needs the money. The two wait in a hotel room for the 3:10 to Yuma. Earlier in the evening, but otherwise less interesting, is Bedtime Story, a frothy sex farce in which David Niven and Shirley Jones come off better than Marlon Brando in a French Riviera con game. If you have nothing better to do with two hours, it's on Channel 7 at 9:00.

IRONSIDE (Color) — 8:30, Channel 5, "Poole's Paradise." Very good show. One of Hollywood's favorite plots — the one about the corrupt sheriff in a small town coming to grips with the film's heroes — gets a nice working over in this teleplay. Ed is held hostage by an escaping prisoner, but all soon suspect that the prisoner has been set up for murder by the sheriff and his crooked deputies. Plenty of action and a relief after last week's two hours of nothing. Incidentally, a series regular leaves the show tonight but is replaced in the final scene.

THIS IS TOM JONES (Color) — 7:30, Channel 8, 9:00 Channel 4. Our Welsh singing star has a fine lineup tonight, as Diahann Carroll (Julia to most of her TV fans), Bob Darin, the musical group called Blood, Sweat and Tears, and youthful satirist David Steinberg, join him for the hour. Diahann's songs include My World is Empty Without You, Traces, and What Did I Have, as well as a duet with Jones, I Love You More Today Than Yesterday, Bob Darin solos to Distraction, and joins his host for Aquarius among others; and the Blood, Sweat and Tears people tune up for Spinning Wheel and Blues Part 2. As for David Steinberg, his monologue has something to do with the Rockettes at the Radio City Music Hall.

DIAHANN
. . . romantic

DEAN MARTIN (Color) — 8:30, Channel 8, 10:00 Channel 5. Caterina Valente, Bob Newhart, frequent guests on Martin's list, key this hour. Newhart and Martin play weary TV viewers looking at a special late late movie; Miss Valente, a charmer, joins Dino for the usual medley, sings "It Only Takes a Moment" alone, and vocalizes with Sebastian Cabot too. Cabot gives Dino a course in wine testing; Corbett Monica steps up for a monologue; Stanley Myron Handelman talks about inferiority complexes, and The Goldiggers back Dean up in a big medley.

JOEY BISHOP, JOHNNY CARSON AND MERV GRIFFIN are offering their standard formats for late-night viewers. Bishop, 11:30 on Channel 4, has baseball great Satchel Paige, and Pigmeat Markham (Here come de judge comic) as tentative guests. Carson has scheduled Joan Bennett and comics Bob and Ray at 11:30 on Channel 5. Merv Griffin, 11:30 on Channels 7 and 12, will talk to journalist I. F. Stone; singers John Blair and John Denver, comics Ron Carey and Jackie Vernon. It's a toss-up which of the three is your best bet.

THE JIM NABORS SHOW (Color) — 8:00, Channel 7, 9:30 Channel 12 Good friend Carol Burnett gives Jim's show the lift it needs tonight, appearing in a number of sketches. Carol, Nabors and Ronnie Schell kid "The Lone Ranger," and work on a baseball routine with Frank Sutton. Jim and Carol sing a medley of tunes on unrequited love; Frank Sutton discusses gun slingers; and Nabors offers numbers like "Down in the Valley."

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

7:30: Ch. 12: Night and the City (1950 drama) Richard Widmark, Gene Tierney.

9:00: Ch. 7: Bedtime Story (1964 comedy) David Niven, Shirley Jones, Marlon Brando.

11:40: Ch. 2: This Is My Street (1963 drama) June Ritchie, Ian Hendry.

12:00: Chs. 6, 8: Circle of Deception (1960 drama) Bradford Dillman, Harry Andrews.

1:05: Ch. 5: 3:10 to Yuma (1957 western) Glenn Ford, Van Heflin, Felicia Farr.

1:30: Ch. 7: City Across the River (1949 drama) Tony Curtis, Steven McNally, Thelma Ritter.

1:30 : Ch. 13: The Deadliest Sin (1956 melodrama) Sydney Chaplin.

Bruins Stressing Defence In Bid to Go All the Way

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The emphasis is on defence as Boston Bruins prepare for the 1969-70 National Hockey League season.

The Bruins used goal-scoring and muscle power in an all-out run for the Stanley Cup last year, their best season in a decade. But those two assets alone proved not enough as Montreal Canadiens ran them out of the playoffs for the second successive season.

Coach Harry Sinden and general manager Milt Schmidt last season built an offensive machine that produced 303 goals in 76 regular-season games, well past the previous one-season high of 264 set by Chicago Black Hawks in 1966-67. The Bruins also used a heavy-hitting style that intimidated their opponents.

But a late-season slump, combined with key injuries to defencemen Bobby Orr and Ted Green, hampered the Bruins and they slipped to second place behind Montreal.

With all their scoring strength intact, the Bruins are concentrating on defensive play. They allowed 221 goals last season, equal defensively to Detroit Red Wings. Only Chicago, 246, allowed more goals in the Eastern Division.

With training camp less than three weeks old, the Bruins' defensive strategy has suffered a heavy loss.

OUT FOR MONTHS

Green, who with Orr forms the cornerstone of the Boston defence, is recovering from a skull fracture suffered in a Sept. 21 exhibition game. He will be out of action for at least two months and possibly most of the season. Orr has also missed several days of training because of a chest ailment.

Orr, whose puck-control abilities made him an instant NHL star three seasons ago at the age of 18, faces a tough leadership task with Green gone.

One candidate to fill Green's regular spot on defence has impressed Schmidt. Gary Doak, 23, a Goderich, Ont., native, came to the Bruins from Detroit in 1966.

Dallas Smith, 27, was Orr's partner last season and Don Awrey is a stable regular. Rick Smith, promoted from Oklahoma City Blazers of the Central Hockey League last year, is hunting for regular duty on defence, as are Barry Wilkins and Bill Speer.

Wilkins, 22, scored 14 goals and 32 assists last season at Oklahoma City and earned first-team defence honors on the CHL all-star team. Speer, 27, is a heavy hitter at 200 pounds. A five-year American Hockey League veteran, Speer, who has been bothered by neck and back ailments most of his pro career, was drafted during the off-season from Pittsburgh Penguins.

Bruins are laden with scoring talent on the forward lines. Centre Phil Esposito, 27, last season scored 49 goals and 77 assists to become the first player in NHL history to collect more than 100 points in a single season.

Right winger Ken Hodge, Esposito's linemate, contributed 45 goals and 45 assists. He had his appendix removed with training camp only several days old, and is lost to the team for two or three weeks.

John McKenzie, with 29 goals last season; 14-year NHL veteran John Bucyk, 24 goals; Fred Stanfield, 25 goals, and Derek Sanderson, 26 goals, all give the Bruins experienced scoring punch on all lines.

The Boston offensive machine also had key parts behind the blue line last season. Orr produced 21 goals and 43 assists and Green collected eight goals and 38 assists.

Among the rookies attempting to crack the Bruins' strong lineup are Dan Schock, Stan Gilbertson and Don Marcotte, all of whom have taken their turns playing left wing for Esposito.

Gilbertson, 24, is an American native from Duluth, Minnesota. He played three seasons in the Western Hockey League before shifting to Hershey Bears of the AHL, where he collected 27 goals last season. Marcotte, 22, also played for Hershey and was with the Bruins briefly last year. Garnet (Ace) Bailey, 21, a left winger who took over from the now-traded Eddie Shack last season after promotion from Hershey, also is a strong challenger for a regular spot on the parent club.

Ed Johnston, 34, and Gerry Cheevers, 28, are both in top form and will share the Bruins' netminding job.

Success for the Bruins in 1969-70 depends on how quickly their injury list shrinks. A fast start could topple Montreal from first place.

Metchosin Ratepayers Opposing Institution

By MARGE PARKER

The majority of the 25 persons at the Metchosin Ratepayers' Association meeting Wednesday approved a motion to inform the provincial government of their opposition to the proposed institution for "brain-damaged youngsters."

The institution is to be constructed on a 98-acre provincially-owned property, fronting on the west side of Metchosin Road just past the far junction with Duke Road.

Robert Johnstone, 3900 Metchosin Road, owns acreage adjoining the government land. At present the land is utilized as a farm to produce beef and sheep for Wilkinson Road and Oakalla prisons.

Johnstone presented a motion to "accept as read" and to circulate a petition signed by Albert Head ratepayers opposing construction of the institution.

Basis for opposition is that it "is contrary to zoning regulations, that it will be detrimental to our environment; that we have more than our share of security institutions."

Esquimalt MLA Herb Bruch had previously informed the Albert Head group that the inmates of the institution would be "of a dangerous calibre" and "incorrigibles they cannot control at Brannan Lake."

Mrs. Jennifer Wenstob said: "These people are human beings who require our acceptance and compassion rather than our rejection. I can't think of a nicer place to get well than in Metchosin."

Geoffrey Mitchell said: "To clean up Brannan Lake does not mean that they are wild animals. They are a part of the burden we all have to assume. To oppose this is to merely ask some other group to take on something we don't want. This institution would give some economic activity to the district. It won't intrude unduly on people who don't like the facts of life."

G. A. Buvyer, representing the Albert Head Ratepayers' Association, suggested a 1,000-acre site near the Shawnigan Lake cutoff as an alternate location for the institution. He criticized the government for "spot solution" and felt that the whole problem should be given more study.

Buvyer said the Albert Head association has suggested to Minister of Municipal Affairs Dan Campbell that "Whenever the government proposes to change the use of land, a referendum be put forth."

The Metchosin group also passed a motion to contact the provincial government for clarification of "exactly what they're going to build."

Larry Ridley was returned as president of the association, Larry Nelson as vice-chairman; Mrs. Jennifer Wenstob, corresponding secretary; Robert Johnstone, recording secretary; Ken Rainey, treasurer.

Rainey, Metchosin director on the Regional District Board, reported briefly on the status of the Centennial swimming pool and asked for an indication of feeling about a centennial project for the district.

Anglican Coastal Mission Future Being Considered

Breaking a tradition of 63 years of waterborne service to isolated Vancouver Island settlements, the Anglican Church's Columbia Coast Mission is without a boat.

The 43-foot Columbia IV, donated by an anonymous Vancouver resident in July 1968, has been sold.

She may never be replaced.

Contacted in New Westminster where he is attending a provincial synod meeting, Bishop John Anderson of Victoria said the future of the mission is under review.

"A study was started last fall and already it may well be out of date. I'm not too sure whether the Columbia IV will be replaced.

TIME PROBLEM

"Fairly substantial communities are growing up on the Island and we'll have to decide how to effectively deal with them.

"Travelling by boat involves a great deal of time, planes may not be the answer."

The bishop said church officials hoped to decide before winter what form of transportation will replace the Columbia.

"We'll have to make up our minds pretty soon. We can't operate in a vacuum too long."

Meanwhile, in Port Hardy, Rev. Ivan Futter, the Columbia's former master, described himself as "sort of stagnant."

He said the Columbia IV had proven unsuitable for service in rough waters because of her flat-bottomed hull.

NEW OWNERS

Without a ship, he is trying to carry out his duties by "using an aircraft from time to time." His parish covers 10,0000 square miles.

Futter hoped the Anglican Church will decide in favor of another vessel.

The mission's 1969 operating budget has been set at $43,216. Of this, the mission hopes to receive $1,000 from the current United Red Feather-Red Cross Appeal.

The Columbia IV has followed the fate of the Shantymen's mission ship Messenger III, which was sold in March. She was replaced by a jumbo-sized camper truck.

Columbia IV's new owners are Mr. and Mrs. Ron Douglas, 4431 Wilkinson. Her traditional mission colors of deep blue and white are being removed to be replaced with mahogany trim and a white hull.

Her name has been changed.

It could well reflect the thoughts of the many isolated islanders who, over the years, looked to the Columbia Coast Mission boats for physical and spiritual help.

It's Mahalo-Nui (Hawiian for Thank You Very Much).

Before the Judge

A witness who claimed he was the subject of defamatory libel at a preliminary hearing last week was charged with the same offense in provincial court Wednesday.

Victor Williams, 1628 Davies Street, pleaded not guilty to publishing a two-page document which allegedly made referency to Sig Corbeil in such a manner to constitute defamatory libel.

He also pleaded not guilty to unlawfully counselling Sylvio A. Corbeil to cause bodily harm to Donald Sykes.

Sykes from Alberta, but formerly of Victoria, was committed for trial last Tuesday following a preliminary hearing before Judge Byers on two charges of defamatory libel.

Williams was remanded to Oct. 21 for a preliminary hearing.

A total of $715 in cash, plus five hand guns, one rifle and ammunition, were stolen from the Royal Coachman Tackle Shop, 1225 Government Street, on Sept. 9, Detective Richard Ward testified in court.

He was called to the stand after Robert A. Desharnais, 17, Blackmore, Alberta, pleaded guilty to breaking into the tackle shop and stealing the money and guns.

The accused was remanded to Oct. 8 for sentence.

A 27-year-old graphic designer from California was remanded until Friday for a pre-sentence report and sentence for possessing marijuana. He pleaded guilty.

Det. George Brock Denison told the court Romolo Ianniello, accompanied by his wife and one child, was stopped just after he had driven his car off the Black Ball ferry.

Eight marijuana cigarettes were found on his person and he readily admitted to the police they were for his own use. The couple had planned to visit Victoria for a week.

His wife has since been deported. Judge Byers was informed.

5,000 Flee Fire in Spain

CARTAGENA, Spain (AP) — An explosion touched off a roaring fire at the Escambreras oil refinery today, killing one person and causing an estimated $21,400,000 damage. Officials evacuated 5,000 inhabitants of the oil community.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately known.

The refinery is owned jointly by Texas Oil Co., Chevron Oil Co. and the state owned National Institute of Industry. It is capable of processing 6,000,000 tons of crude oil a year.

Spokesmen said the flames spread to storage tanks containing 1,800,000 gallons of petroleum. Firefighters from a dozen neighboring communities, including a U.S.-Spanish joint military base near Cartagena, cleared a three-mile belt around the area.

HOME GARDEN

Flower, Foliage Color Important

By HILDA BEASTALL

When brilliant color is used as a chief attention-getting device it happens sometimes that the plants themselves are less important than the color of their flowers or foliage.

This situation occurs when a gardener plants an area overlooked from street level and wants plenty of color. He may forego use of annuals to avoid the double job of planting and removal.

Hilda

If he doesn't wish to settle for shrubs, the remaining possibility is for herbaceous perennials.

The greatest effect is obtained by using plants of one kind and one color, or at most three kinds and three colors.

For viewing from sidewalk and street, flowers placed well back on a lot need either to be individually large like peonies or in large masses of small blooms like nepeta with its slender mauve spikes and grey green leaves.

I can remember a wide front border curving out into the lawn, the center of the border filled with a dozen or so splendid peonies which bloomed in May, June and into July, and a long season of Nepeta mussini as an edgeing.

Fall colchicums were grouped just behind and between the nepta to come as an early fall surprise with the purplish bronze and dull maroons of peony foliage.

For earliest spring, groups of six trumpet daffodils flowered as peony growths started. The bulbs were left in to bloom for three or four years and replaced periodically as needed.

The remainder of the whole planting required a minimum of maintenance. In fact, when I saw it last summer after several years, the only change visible was the addition of an Eleyi crabapple tree for the center of the border just to break the direct street view from the living room windows.

For a new bed, the single Japanese peonies would make a spectacular sight. Their blossoms are huge, silky soft, with clusters of golden stamens. Closing each night encourages them to last many days instead of spending all their energies in full blown beauty for only two or three.

The color range is much the same as in the doubles, white into palest pink, rich pink and scarlet, all with the unbelievable texture of softest silk.

Foliage of the singles is finer and more colorful in summer and fall, making them superb for landscaping.

Once planted, they need no dividing for many years.

FLASHBACK ON CANADA

Hochelaga Proved Big Disappointment

By BOB BOWMAN

Jacques Cartier was not only a great explorer but kept a diary that has provided historians with valuable information about early Canada. His visit to present-day Montreal, then the Indian village of Hochelaga, was one of his most colorful experiences.

Cartier was looking for the short route from Europe to China and believed he was almost there when he arrived at Stadacona, now Quebec. His hopes were kindled when he heard about Hochelaga. The Indians had vivid imaginstions and led him to believe that it was a modern, wealthy city. So Cartier took the smallest of his three ships, the "Petite Hermine," and sailed up the river in late September, 1535.

It was a glorious trip, with the trees taking on their autumn colors, and Cartier described them as "the finest trees in the world." The natives along the shore were friendly and one chief near the Richelieu River offered Cartier two of his children as presents. Cartier took one of them, a little girl, back to France.

However, Hochelaga was a disappointment, and Cartier realized that he was far from China. The rich city turned out to be a poor village, now the heart of Montreal. On October 2 he climbed Mount Royal and could see hundreds of square miles of virgin land all around him.

Cartier carried a copper dagger, which looked like gold, and a silver whistle. He showed them to the Indians and asked in sign language if they knew where there were any metals like them. The Indians pointed to the west. Later Cartier found what appeared to be diamonds along the shore of the St. Lawrence, but they turned out to be rock crystal. However, in recent years diamond experts have announced that the geological formation of some areas along the river is right for diamonds, and a South African company has been doing some exploration work. The Indians may have known about diamonds, after all, and it has taken 400 years to find out that they were right.

After visiting Hochelaga, Cartier returned to Stadacona for the winter which turned out to be a dreadful experience because 25 of his sailors died from scurvy, although the little Indian girl survived.

One of the strange things about Cartier's visit to Hochelaga was that Champlain found no trace of it when he went there more than 70 years later. The Indians were migratory and their metropolis had disappeared.

Other events on Oct. 2:

1710 — Port Royal surrendered to force from New England leading to creation of Nova Scotia.

1758 — First parliament to meet within present-day Canada opened at Halifax.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED L. KARPIN

At all echelons of play, games and slams made via mistakes by the opponents count exactly as much as games and slams made by brilliant technical execution. The deal today is a case in point. In it, our South declarer gave the East defender an opportunity to slip — and East fell for it.

North-South vulnerable. East deals.

♠ 7 4 3
♡ 10 9 6 5 2
◇ 8
♣ Q 7 4 2

WEST
♠ J
♡ A 4 3
◇ J 9 7 5 4 3
♣ J 8 5

EAST
♠ 8 6 2
♡ 8 7
◇ A K Q 10 2

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 10 9 5
♡ K Q J
◇ 6
♣ A 6 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Double	4 ◇	Pass
Pass	4 ♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Five of ◇.

West's leap to four diamonds over South's take-out double was a pre-emptive call designed to make it difficult for his vulnerable opponents to find their optimum contract. As it developed, however, South, with his powerhouse holding, could not be deterred from bidding four spades.

After winning the opening lead with his diamond queen, East shifted to a heart. West, upon taking his ace, returned a heart, which South won with his queen.

The ace and king of trumps were cashed next, it being revealed that East still possessed the eight-spot. Had the four outstanding trumps been divided 2-2, declarer, after cashing the heart king, could have entered dummy via the trump seven. On the board's two high hearts, South could then have discarded his losing clubs.

Of course, if West possessed the club king, then by leading a club toward dummy's queen South would be able to restrict his club losers to just one trick. But in view of East's opening bid, the West's possession of the heart ace, the club king was almost surely in East's hand. Hence, a club lead towards dummy's queen would result in the loss of two club tricks.

After drawing two trumps, leaving East with the trump eight, South laid down the king of hearts. East ruffed this trick — and it was a mistake. He then returned a club, and South went right up with his ace. He now entered dummy via the trump seven, and discarded his two little clubs on the board's nine and ten of hearts.

Had East not ruffed the heart king, declarer could not have avoided the loss of two club tricks.

Funnyman Groucho Marx, 74, Still Leering

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Happy birthday to Groucho Marx, 74 today and still leering at the ladies.

"Would you pull your skirt down?" he asked a co-ed as he addressed a collegiate audience this week. "It's very distracting—even at my age."

Groucho's tongue still is scalpel sharp.

To a fumbling theatre man trying to raise Groucho's microphone he complained: "This is really the age of mediocrity. Is this your regular job?"

The students had just witnessed the Marx Brothers' 1935 MGM vehicle A Night at the Opera. It was the first of 10 screenings of old pictures being presented by the Movie Academy, with a star answering questions after each showing.

The students enjoyed Groucho's antics as Otis B. Driftwood, fast-talking promoter in crouching pursuit of a wealthy dowager.

There were shrieks and applause for his late brothers: wild-wigged, non-speaking Harpo, the self-taught harpist, and brash Chico, playing a piano with an eloquent forefinger.

Afterward Groucho perched down front on a high stool and answered questions.

He's nearly bald now and almost gaunt.

"I'm a little hard of hearing," he said, asking that a question be repeated.

Was Harpo always silent? "Not when we split the money."

Season's New TV Shows Offer Little Extraordinary Appeal

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Comedian Herb Shriner used to tell how they once held a beauty contest in his home town and nobody won. By parallel association, we come today to an assessment of the season's new television series.

If you were asked to name the better programs of the new season, you would have to include CBS-TV's interview with Soviet writer-defector Anatoly Kuznetsov, and NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" talk with Stalin's daughter, and ABC-TV's "Folk Gospel Music Festival" and CBS-TV's Woody Allen Special. But no series, really, has anything extraordinary about it.

HUMOROUS ROMANCE

Several, of course, have something to recommend them. For example, ABC-TV's "Love, American Style," a weekly group of humorous contemporary tales of romance, is most promising.

NBC-TV's "Then Came Bronson," with Michael Parks as a sort of motorcycle replacement for the old nomad cowboy hero—here today to straighten things out, then gone tomorrow—has a strong star, fine photography and a good contemporary touch.

ABC-TV's "Room 222," about a Negro history teacher and his associates in an integrated high school, is a nice mixture of contemporary message-melodrama and wry humor (provided by Michael Constantine as a world-weary principal).

COSBY STRONG

NBC-TV's Bill Cosby comedy, meanwhile, has a tremendously strong and appealing star, and I like the way plots give way in his show to something like extended monologues concerning people, the way things are and cool attitudes—via vignettes.

One standard situation comedy, CBS-TV's "The Governor and J.J.," offers some pleasant banter of an escapist kind by Dan Dailey (the governor) and Julie Sommers (as his daughter). Miss Sommers is surely video's female catch of the season.

So much for those new shows that seem to have more to offer than the others. There are, however, two new hour-long soap-opera type serials that are very fancily done (I mean for sheer plushness). One is NBC-TV's "Bracken's World," about a movie studio. The other is ABC-TV's "The Survivors," focusing on those parasitic bums known as the beautiful people. Given a chance in the right time slots, both shows could catch on.

Berthanova Recital Lacking in Interest

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Victoria Symphony guest artist, Eva Bernathova, in her solo recital at McPherson Playhouse, Wednesday, proved conclusively that she has ample power and keyboard facility.

In contrast to the restrained, almost muted performance of the Beethoven Concerto in the weekend concerts, Bernathova unleashed masses of tone and racing tempos in the virtuosic Liszt B. minor Sonata and at times in the Beethoven No. 30.

Curiously enough, however, her entire program lacked, for me, the charm and interest of her concerto performance.

INACCURACIES

It is possible that the three concerts and university campus recital she had already given had tired her.

But can this, and the fact that there were a number of inaccuracies, notably in her Beethoven sonata, be accepted in an artist with a claim to international status?

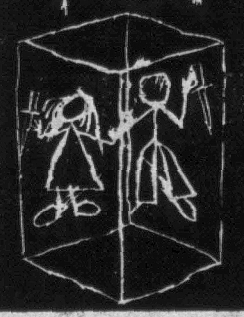

The Debussy miniatures had pleasurable moments and the scintillating virtuosity of "Fireworks" was well handled.

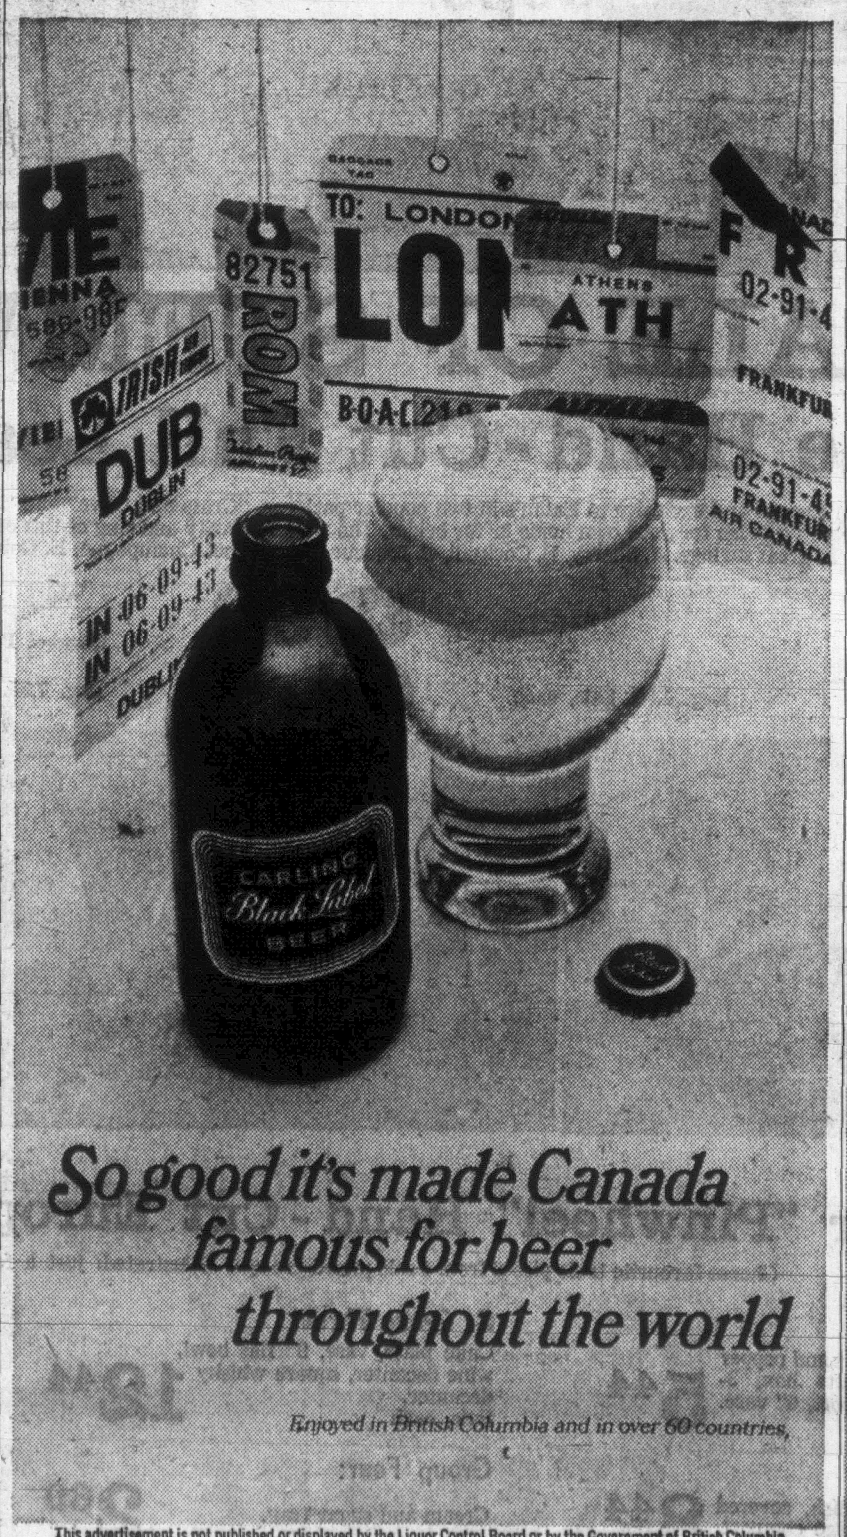

But the Janacek Sonata and even the gorgeous Beethoven variations were uninspired to the point of dullness with lacklustre inflections in the shaping and development of phrases and therefore an absence of growth and drama.

Rebellion Threatens

EDMONTON (CP) — A brief prepared for the Alberta government says that if Ottawa abolishes Indian reserves it could provoke civil disturbances that would make the Riel rebellion of 1885 look like a "kindergarten picnic." The brief was prepared by Prof. L. C. Green, political scientist and international law expert at University of Alberta.

STUDENT PROTESTERS jam main entrance to Legislative Buildings Wednesday to register opposition to today's Amchitka Island nuclear test explosion. About 600 high school students from Greater Victoria area participated.

'Silent Vigil' Didn't Happen

By NEILL GADDES

"All we are saying is give peace a chance" was the theme of the protest but at times peace's chance was far from peaceful.

This was the Legislative Buildings Wednesday afternoon as 600 Greater Victoria high school students protested the American nuclear test at Amchitka Island in the Aleutians set for today.

★ ★ ★

What had been termed a "half-hour silent vigil" never materialized as participants spent an hour gathering at their meeting place, the steps of the buildings.

Plans originally called for the protesters to march to the buildings but Victoria and Oak Bay schools were the only ones to do so.

Eighty marchers from Victoria High arrived at 4 p.m., 15 minutes after the protest was to start and a hundred marchers from Oak Bay were another 20 minutes late.

This left the rest of the protesters waiting for something to happen.

Joyce Flatman and Theresa Barker, both of Oak Bay, had driven to the demonstration and said they were there to support the provincial protest to Ottawa announced by Attorney-General Leslie Peterson on Tuesday.

Peter Saunders of Victoria High thought the U.S. was not caring enough about the people of the west coast.

"Nixon should use more consideration before firing the bomb."

The Oak Bay marchers arrived amid cheering, clapping and chanting of "ban the bomb" to be bewildered at the tone of the protest.

Sue Loft of Oak Bay after marching from school still thought the protest was to be a "silent vigil."

★ ★ ★

Protesters then surged into the Buildings, in the hope of meeting some government spokesman, but instead toured the halls in a chanting mass.

A department of public works security officer said the protesters had "just as much right as anyone else" to be in the building. When asked where the premier was, he said "somewhere in Europe."

Mount Douglas student council president Sam Seright felt the protest idea good but lacked organization.

"The protest loses direction without the government coming out to meet the students.

"A council of student presidents could have been used to meet with the government and exchange views," he added.

Oak Bay teacher Ray Wunderlich, "a participant, not a spokesman," urged the students to return to the original concept of a silent protest on the steps outside.

He said later that entering the buildings "was a mistake but no damage was done."

The students moved out to the steps again after half an hour inside the building.

Garry Brooks of Victoria High also spoke inside, stressing order and quiet.

Undefended Border Closed by Pickets

By ROBIN BURGESS
(Special to The Times)

DOUGLAS — The Canadian-American border crossing from Blaine, Wash., was closed for the first time since 1814 Wednesday, as B.C. students blocked the road here in protest against today's scheduled nuclear test.

While American patrolmen re-routed north-bound tourists to the commercial border-crossing two miles away, almost 5,000 college and university students stopped traffic coming into Canada at the Blaine crossing for one hour.

The purpose of the demonstration, according to student leaders, was to voice disapproval to the federal government for not condemning the U.S. government's plan to detonate a nuclear bomb at Amchitka in the Aleutian Islands.

Forty students from the University of Victoria arrived by bus to swell the ranks.

RIGHT AND DUTY

"The odds are against an earthquake, University of B.C. Alma Mater Society president Fraser Hodge told the crowd.

"But there is a chance something may happen.

"We as citizens and students have a right and a duty to allow our feelings to be known."

Father Herbert O'Driscoll, of Christ Church Cathedral in Vancouver, one of the scheduled speakers, described the visit he and other representatives of the clergy had made to the office of the American consulate in Vancouver to present a written protest of the test explosion.

SIGNIFICANCE

The consul "listened very politely," said O'Driscoll, "and I had a funny feeling that somehow the great consuls of the past had listened to witchdoctors on the borders of the great empires in just the same way."

Former UBC AMS president Dave Zirnhelt stressed the moral significance of the protest.

"We will have accomplished something if we do nothing more than tell others we have the guts to stand up for what we believe in," he said.

The chances of more nuclear tests off the Aleutians, should this one prove a success, are very likely, UBC geophysicist Tadeusz Ulrych told the crowd.

He referred to the test as an experiment on the part of the American government.

LARGER BLASTS

"They want to see if these sites can be used for larger blasts, up to five or six megatons," Ulrych said.

The force of Thursday's blast was officially announced as one megaton.

"No one knows what is going to happen, but it is ridiculous to conduct an explosion in a part of the world that is so unstable."

Ray Haynes, from the British Columbia Federation of Labour, pledged union support of the protest movement.

Vancouver Sun columnist Bob Hunter referred to the nuclear test as the American military organism's orgasm.

SPLINTER GROUP

A splinter group of students set up a second mike and tried to persuade demonstrators to move to the alternate border crossing and block traffic there.

"This demonstration is relatively ineffective, becuase cars have been re-routed. Let's move people to the other route to make this an effective act of civil disobediance," shouted a representative ot the International Workers of the World.

"Where do we go?" shouted students.

"Straight up the road," he replied.

TRUCKS STOPPED

Almost 800 students broke away from the main demonstration, walked to the re-routed border crossing, and sat down on the Candain side, chanting stop that bomb! and clapping in rhythm.

The splinter group managed to block about 50 cars attempting to cross into Canada.

Most of the cars were driven by Americans, but some Canadian long-haul trucks were in the line-up.

One large truck tried to drive straight through, but was soon blocked by a wall of students.

Stopped motorists generally seemed to know the reasons behind the protest.

PEACE DOVE

"I think it's okay," said an American motorist of about 60. "I know it's about the bomb in Alaska."

Escorting the university students were about 40 junior high school students from White Rock.

An RCMP officer asked the demonstrators at the commercial crossing to disperse.

"Yes, it's time to break off the demonstration now," shouted a student leader, "But any more bombs and we'll be back."

As a reminder of the protest, the students hoisted a large cardboard dove of peace to the top of the peace tower at the Blaine border, before leaving quietly.

Nation-Wide Rumble Protests Alaska Bomb

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

An American nuclear test blast set for today in the Aleutian Islands sent shock waves of protest rumbling across Canada long before its scheduled explosion.

Demonstrators—mostly students—protested at United States border points Wednesday to show their concern over the possible effects of the underground test—estimated to be equivalent to 1,000,000 tons of TNT.

The protests were mainly peaceful and orderly as students from Victoria to Halifax let it be known that they were opposed to the Amchitka Island blast in the North Pacific.

But in Sarnia, Ont., where about 2,000 students from London's University of Western Ontario and Fanshawe College blockaded the Sarnia-Port Huron, Mich., bridge by holding a sit-in demonstration, two students were injured when a Michigan woman drove her car through the crowd.

And in Windsor, Ont., four students—among a crowd of about 500 University of Windsor students—were arrested for obstructing traffic and swearing.

Demonstrators from Montreal travelled to the border points of Rouses Point, N.Y., and Champlain, N.Y. to offer protest, but they had to walk the last five miles to the border.

Although only a small group of demonstrators marched in front of the American embassy in Ottawa, the men on Parliament Hill were voicing their concern over the scheduled test.

At the United Nations in New York, Ray Perrault (L—Burnaby-Seymour), delivered a letter to the U.S. mission urging a delay or cancellation of the blast.

Halt-Blast Drive Fails

Amchitka Test On Schedule

Times News Services

A chorus of protests, official and otherwise, failed to halt a scheduled underground nuclear explosion on Amchitka Island in the North Pacific today.

And the United States Atomic Energy Commission said this morning three earthquakes in California overnight and early today in no way affected its plans.

Thousands of persons in Canada and elsewhere have protested the Amchitka blast, fearing it would cause a tremor in the earthquake-prone Aleutian chain.

More Than 7,000 Protest

Protests reached a climax Wednesday with demonstrations along the Canadian-United States border involving more than 7,000 students in British Columbia alone. The student protest, conceived by the University of Victoria student union, was enacted at points from Halifax to Victoria.

(See stories on pages 3 and 40 for details on Vancuover and local demonstrations Wednesday.)

Canada and Japan, both damaged by the 1964 Alaska earthquake, have filed formal objections with Washington.

Meanwhile, Alaska Gov. Keith Miller again defended the test, saying he is convinced the protests are "a result of a well-financed, highly organized international movement."

MILLER

Tidal Wave News at 8:30 p.m.

Scientists at Victoria's Dominion Astrophysical Laboratory on Little Saanich Mountain said today the shock waves from the blast would register on their seismic monitors approximately seven minutes after the 3 p.m. explosion.

If a tidal wave is generated by the nuclear test, they say, it will reach Tofino on Vancouver Island's west coast about 8:30 p.m. tonight.

Emergency measures organizations, municipal, provincial and state authorities and civil defence systems were poised today for action should the blast trigger a tidal wave.

At Port Alberni, which suffered heavy damage in a tidal wave following the 1964 earthwuake, civic authorities have established an elaborate warning and evacuation plan which would be triggered by an alert from Victoria.

The Washington State Civil Defence System is prepared to alert coastal communities if a need for evacuation arises, and various U.S. agencies are planning increased radiation monitoring this month in connection with the blast.

On windswept Amchitka Island, 1,400 miles southwest of Anchorage, Alaska, scientists and technicians made ready monitoring devices and television cameras to record the one-megaton blast, equal to the detonation of 1,000,000 tons of TNT.

Robert Miller, operations manager for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, told reporters Wednesday:

EARTHQUAKE KILLS 10

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Ten persons were killed and 50 injured in an earthquake Wednesday in the central state of Junin, authorities reported today.

The tremor destroyed about 300 houses in several small villages near Huancayo, about 180 miles east of Lima.

Marine Service Cut Back

Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to reduce federal government spending has thrown a left hook at the Victoria Marine Services Base.

Larry Slaght, district manager of the department of transport's marine services branch, said today his operating budget has lost more than $400,000.

This is the amount expected to be paid in salaries and wage increases during the current fiscal year.

The money won't come from the government's central fund as in past years, but from the base's budget of $4.8 million.

Slaght says balancing his budget will probably require laying off one of three servicing vessels (Estevan, Douglas or Camsell) for the winter season.

Depending on the effectiveness of other economy measures, he adds, it may be necessary to put one vessel in mothballs completely.

Slaght is confident the reductions will not mean dismissal of permanent employees.

"However," he adds, "it does mean that a lot of casual labor such as stewards and oilers, will have to go."

NEW METHODS

He says his department will have to develop new methods of operation in order to maintain efficiency and still remain within his budget.

"We will have to use helicopters more than we do now. We have three based at Pat Bay. The weather ships Quadra and Vancouver will be closed down while in port and maintenance work done by day labor, rather than the permanent crew."

Slaght has 30 lighthouse stations and about 600 unwatched lights in his area. He says that it will be necessary to switch to more semi-automatic stations. Major construction will be reduced where it does not involve service efficiency.

NO REPAIRS

"Some of our lighthouse-keepers with dilapidated living quarters may have to wait a while for repairs."

He says the government's decision to spend $1 billion on northern development is the main reason for reduction.

Capital Gains Tax Studied by Tories

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called today for an easing of the tax burden on lower-income groups and said there are strong equity arguments for a capital gains tax.

He told the Empire Club here that he strongly feels "the present level of exemptions on personal income tax just cannot be justified in terms of its relative burden on lower income groups."

Mr. Stanfield said exemption levels should be adjusted for the lower-income groups, but not at the expense of introducing new inequities for those in higher brackets.

Revenue lost from the adjustment must be found elsewhere, he said.

"If you are doctrinaire about these things, it is easy enough to talk about socking it to those in, say, the $10,000 to $20,000 a year group.

"But they already pay a heavier personal income tax than their counterparts in the U.S. So long as the brain drain concerns us, we should try to avoid a tax system that places us at too great a disadvantage vis-a-vis the U.S. in this respect."

TAX REFORM

Mr. Stanfield also said a capital gains tax, as part of an over-all package of tax reform, "has to be given very serious consideration."

It would not be a good policy to simply pile a capital gains tax on top of the present system, he said.

"Certainly, on grounds of equity, there are strong arguments for taxing capital gains as well as income.

Mr. Stanfield said the Conservative party policy conference in Niagara Falls, Ont. Oct. 9-13 will have to take into account several important practical considerations related to a capital gains tax.

"For example, what special consideration can be devised with regard to gains arising from the sale of the family farm, the family home or the family business.

"Again, since most capital gains arise over a relatively long period of time, what account should be taken of this in establishing rates?

These questions must be considered in the context of the whole tax system.

"I believe a capital gains tax proposal could only be implemented in the context of a system where the rate structure applying to all types of income is appropriate and does not seem to be confiscatory."

EARTHQUAKE damage in California, from strongest tremors recorded in that state in 12 years, includes Santa Rosa hotel wall which collapsed (left) crushing car examined by patrolman (right). California Quake Worst in 12 Years

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP)—At least 24 persons were injured by two earthquakes that ruined two houses here Wednesday night, knocked out electrical power and broke gas and water mains.

No fatalities were reported.

A third tremor, milder than the first two, was recorded between 5:27 and 5:28 a.m. PDT today.

The tremors centred at Santa Rosa, 60 miles north of San Francisco, but were felt as far south as Gilroy, 75 miles south of San Francisco.

A 20-foot wide section of brick wall fell from the third storey of the Miramar Bar to the street, heavily damaging a parked automobile.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. said electrical power was off for eight minutes in the city of nearly 50,000 residents. The utility called in emergency crews and had 50 men shutting off leaking gas mains. One small fire was extinguished before there was serious damage.

Water from broken pipes caused damage in one department store.

MOST WERE OUT

Injured persons were taken to three hospitals in the Santa Rosa area. Most suffered cuts caused by broken glass, although there was one report of a broken neck.

One house was jolted four feet off its foundations and another was so badly rocked that it probably will have to be torn down.

Seismologists at the University of California in Berkeley said the first quake was at 9:56 p.m. PDT and the second

Haynsworth Withdrawal?

WASHINGTON (AP — Congressional sources said today Judge Clement F. Haynsworth has asked President Nixon to withdraw his nomination for a seat on the United States Supreme Court, but the White House said its latest information "indicates that this report is absolutely untrue."

TREMORS HINT RUSSIA TESTING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission has reported another seismic disturbance from a region of the Soviet Union used for underground nuclear tests.

The first disturbance, announced Sunday, was recorded south of Volgograd. A disturbance was recorded Wednesday in the Semipalainsk region of Siberia, the AEC said.

While unable to determine the cause of the disturbances, the AEC indicated they were caused by the explosion of a low to intermediate range nuclear device, comparing with detonation of 20,000 to 200,000 tons of TNT.

Grain Hopes Rise At Gromyko Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government is optimistic that Russia will agree to buy a huge quantity of wheat still outstanding under the 1966 Soviet-Canadian wheat agreement, a qualified source said today.

Fulfilment by the Soviet Union of the terms of the agreement would mean a big boost for the ailing Western Canada farm economy. Some 133,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour remain to be purchased under the three-year deal, which technically expired two months ago.

An external affairs department spokesman, giving reporters a fill-in on talks here today between Canadian officials and visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, said the Canadian side was "satisfied" with the progress of discussions on the wheat deal.

These discussions occupied about one-third of the 2½ hours which the Russians and Canadians, led by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, spent in closed conference.

The official refused to elaborate. Asked a further question later, however, he said the Canadian side is optimistic the remaining grain will be sold to the Soviets.

DISCUSS OTHER SUBJECTS

This was the strongest expression of hopefulness yet made by a Canadian official that the Soviets will eventually honor their obligations. He emphasized that Canada has never stated that Russia is in default on the deal.

Discussion of the wheat deal was to be taken up again at subsequent meetings during Mr. Gromyko's two-day visit here, which ends Friday.

Other topics touched upon today included Soviet-Canadian scientific and cultural exchanges, and the comparative positions of the two sides in respect to the application of international law to Arctic waters.

No Proof Biafra Mercenaries Coming From Canada, UN Told

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canadian officials said Wednesday a charge by federal Nigeria's foreign affairs spokesman that Canadians are serving as mercenaries in breakaway Biafra was unproven.

Canadians here were visibly startled when Okoi Arikpo, Nigeria's external affairs minister, told the General Assembly that Canadians were among nationals of several Western nations fighting with the Biafrans in the Nigerian civil war.

The unofficial attitude among members of the Canadian delegations was one of hurt. They pointed out that Canada has attempted to play a neutral role in the war and has poured millions of dollars of aid into the western African area.

Arikpo told the Assembly:

"There is no longer any secret from where the rebel regime, which has no economic resources and which for two years had no export trade whatsoever, continues to obtain the hard currency to pay for the modern weapons it uses against the fatherland and with which it pays those mercenaries from Sweden, France, Canada, Portugal, Belgium, South Africa, Rhodesia, the United States of America and other Western countries. . . ."

SHARP
. . . surprised by charge

External Affairs Minister Sharp had talked with Arikpo only last week and it was reported the Nigerian had given no indication he would make such a statement.

Sharp also discussed the Biafran question with Nigeria, representatives of Biafra and other African countries who support the Biafran cause while he was here.

There were indications Wednesday night that Canada was still seeking clarification of the Nigerian position and it was reported that the Canadian mission here was in touch with the external affairs department in Ottawa shortly after Arikpo's speech.

About two hours after the Nigerian spoke, the Canadian mission issued a statement saying the charge Canadians are serving as mercenaries had not been proven.

AERIAL WAR

These "racist renegades and their compeers" had openly raised money in their own countries "with which they wage a war, often an aerial war, against Nigeria, and with which they finance and conduct a campaign of villification" aimed at dismembering Nigeria.

Canadian officials were clearly taken aback by Arikpo's speech.

Girls Fire-Bomb U.S. Consulate

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two girls were being sought by police today, following a fire-bomb incident Wednesday at the U.S. Consulate office, on the second floor of a downtown building.

Witnesses saw one girl, aged about 20, throw a plastic bottle toward the office. It hit the door jamb and exploded into flames, damaging the floor and wall.

The girls fled down a fire exit, but were caught within seconds by Vice-Consul Norman Del Giante and consulate customer Dilip Nelson.

"We brought them upstairs and I opened the lobby door to see how bad the fire was," said Mr. Nelson. "The flames shot into my face and burned by eyebrows off. The girls ran away again. I ran after one and caught her.

"I was holding her against the wall and said: 'Cool it, you started the fire.' She said: 'Yeah, man, they were going to kill millions Thursday.'

"Then the building commissionaire came up. He told us to sort out our troubles outside the place and I told him the girl had started a fire on the second floor.

"He wrenched my arm away and she got away again."

Consul-General Milton C. Rewinkle said the bomb missed the door and bounced off into the lobby.

"If it had come in it would have gone right under the desk of our young receptionist," he said. "It would have been disastrous.

Other witnesses said they saw the girls carrying the bottle in the lobby. "There's a bomb in there—everyone get out," the girls said.

Oil Leaks $500

MONTREAL (CP) — The captain of a 3,500-ton German freighter has been fined $500 because his ship spilled about 12 gallons of crude oil into the St. Lawrence River near Montreal.

Capt. Uwe Borchers, 36, said the oil leaked from a faulty fuel coupling on his ship, the Christiane Schulte.

When You're Poor Enough You Shoplift to Survive

They Tell Ministers How It Is . . . Bleak

By REG SILVESTER

The four welfare ministers were mostly silent. Ray Speaker of Alberta looked bored. Cy MacDonald of Saskatchewan was interested. Norbert Theriault of New Brunswick smiled.

John Munro of Canada smoked.

Dan Campbell of British Columbia wasn't there.

Munro thought the panel discussion Wednesday night with some of the poor people of Victoria was good, "but the time for welfare ministers and governments to react is other than here."

How do you survive on welfare? an unidentified woman was asked.

"I'm a shoplifter. I had to become one. I steal all my clothes, all my children's clothes and almost all my food. I hope and pray to God I don't get caught."

The welfare ministers were silent. The audience nervously laughed.

Reg Clarkson, executive secretary of the Low Income Group, handled the meeting at the YMCA like a ringmaster, asking questions, interpreting answers, addressing the ministers by their first names, and continually avoiding putting them on the spot.

Munro and the Poor: Reactions Mixed

'We Need Action, Soon' Munro Tells Provinces At Ministers' Conference

He continued the questioning.

"I had one meal in my house last month and I stole it from a supermarket. I have exactly $1.60 a month left after rent and bills."

This morning Munro spoke at the opening of a federal-provincial conference of welfare ministers at the Legislative Buildings. He said pressure for change is growing. Welfare recipients and other minorities are forming groups with political objectives.

Wednesday night they told John Munro:

● "I'm afraid of the coldness the winter's bringing."

● "My son is afraid to go to school Monday mornings. He has physical education classes and we can't afford to buy him running shoes."

● "I'll be damned if I'll stop fighting. I'll either find a sugar daddy or a new man or do a darn good job on my own."

● "I don't have any outside life. I'm sick. Sometimes I'd like to die."

● "They wanted to send me back to Saskatchewan. I just told them I wouldn't go back because it's too cold. I said I'd sit in the middle of the street if I had to."

In his speech to the welfare ministers, Munro listed four alternatives. Continue as is. Cut back on low return projects. Increase rates with present structure. Or restructure the entire system.

"I am sure you will share my concern about the possibility that those who are unable to provide adequately for their own support should not have some protection against the added costs of living that affect all members of society," he said.

"We cannot waste any more time studying the perhipheries of the problem. We need action, and soon."

At the Y, Walter Olszewski, president of the Low Income Group, was more urgent.

"Now is the time to do it. If you don't start giving us more, your cities are going to be burned down.

"And so help me God, I'll be lighting the match."

A man stood up in the audience, identifying himself as a former welfare administrator.

"The whole system is based on this agrarian fear that the unworthy poor will get away with something."

A lot of discretion lies with the civil service hierarchy, and their tendency is to deny any application that has the slightest fault, he said.

And the ministers were told:

● "My social worker had a job for me—living common law with a man who had a stroke. I went down and looked at the job and it wasn't any good."

● "My social worker told me I was young enough to go out and find a man to buy the things we needed. A girl friend of mine had the same experience."

● "I wanted to sell cosmetics. I asked for a larger clothing allowance to buy a new dress so I could put my brightest foot forward. (Request refused.) If I want out (of welfare) you have to give me a shove."

Some excerpts from Munro's speech this morning:

"Too many people spend too much of their budget on the absolute raw necessities of food and shelter, with nothing left over to enable them to get out of their present situation."

"This is important; the present set-up has been accused, with a good deal of justice, of acting as an agent of continued dependency and deprivation."

"The ultimate objective is easily stated: the elimination of the welfare roles if possible, with every family supported by a breadwinner in a decently paying job."

Of the "welfare roles" at the Y:

A six-year-old girl is so used to macaroni and potatoes that on the few occasions meat is available, she doesn't like it.

Teen-aged children can't get enough money even to take a bus down town. They drop out of school early to earn money to be able to do the same things their friends do. They can't stand to hear "we can't afford it" any more.

Children can't join organizations. They don't have enough money for dues or uniforms. No extra cash for sports equipment. They don't have the price of admission to a dance or a movie.

Young children would like to see museums or marinas. "We can't afford it."

A high school girl gets dressed down by her principal for being unable to bring money for supplies. "You welfare people think you can get away with anything," he tells her.

Munro: "I am confident they (the Canadian people) will enthusiastically back reforms which reduce or eliminate the instance of a continuing cycle of poverty, passed down from generation to generation because of bad housing, inadequate diets, insufficient care, bad health, substandard schools, the necessity to supplement meagre family income, and other factors which have led to improper education and a high early dropout rate by children of the poor."

It's important that the people who are going to "enthusiastically" support reform understand the plight of the poor. "The public has a right to know more about the problem and its potential solutions. The more they do know, the more confident I am that we will be able to present major changes in the system and obtain general public support for them," he said today.

A woman in the audience stood up Wednesday night. "There's plenty in this country for everyone to have a good standard of living. If we as the working public aren't sympathetic to these people, we're shovelling our own grave."

And a woman on welfare says she has never had a new dress or coat or shoes. She didn't have a winter coat.

The fuel allowance keeps a house warm for four months. It's cold eight.

Window frames fall apart in "a house that should be condemned."

A woman gets on the wrong side of her social worker because she appealed a ruling that she get welfare support for only seven of her 12 children. How did she know she could appeal? The worker is suspicious.

'Shovelling Own Graves' If Working Public Keeps Current Attitude to Poor

Another gets no cheque because there's a rumor her husband is supporting her. "With welfare, any rumor is true, and you're guilty until proven innocent."

Theriault of New Brunswick is "delighted" to realize other provinces have troubles.

MacDonald of Saskatchewan said there are good and bad social workers.

Speaker of Alberta said things could be improved.

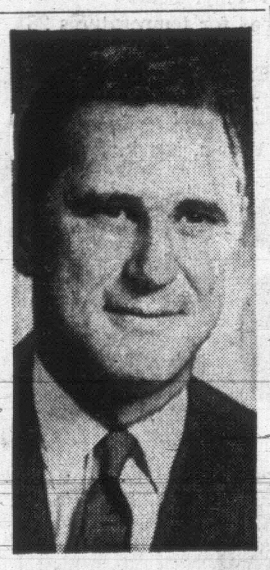

Munro of Canada said this morning: "The out groups of our society do not just suffer objectively from the lack of the means to make a decent living. But they also suffer subjectively, from a sense of isolation and powerlessness with regard even to those things which touch their lives most intimately."

"What we now need is to establish channels, formal and informal, active and passive, quiet and noisy, to the representatives of this lonely crowd."

"How can we help them if we don't even know them?"

● "So I said to my social worker, look buddy, if it wasn't for me, you'd be out of a job."

Jets Roar Over Parade Opening RCAF Convention

APPOINTMENT of John A. Hamilton as acting advertising director of Victoria Press Limited is announced by W. A. Irwin, the company's vice-president. H. L. Alexander, the present advertising director and assistant general manager, will assume responsibility for co-ordinating the planning of the company's projected new building on property immediately to the south of the existing premises. Hamilton was formerly manager of the Toronto advertising office of F.P. Publications, representing the Winnipeg Free Press, Ottawa Journal, Calgary Albertan, Lethbridge Herald, The Daily Colonist, Victoria Daily Times and the Free Press Weekly.

A jet flypast and a parade through downtown Victoria to the Cenotaph highlighted opening ceremonies of the 19th annual national convention of the Royal Canadian Air Force Association today.

Some 400 delegates from 75 Canadian wings and three situated in the San Francisco area are attending the Empress Hotel meeting.

This is the first time the convention has been held in Victoria.

Ceremonies this morning began with a colorful parade of flags, the bearers marching to the music of the Canadian Forces Naden Band.

Among the guests were Lieutenant-Governor John Nicholson and Mayor Hugh Stephen.

Air Marshal Wilfrid Curtis of Toronto, national grand president, stressed the need for increased membership in order to play an effective role. There are 10,500 members.

National president Alex M. Jardine of Victoria described the association's support of air cadets as one of its most important commitments.

★ ★ ★

He also emphasized the need for more members, stating the group's impact on the federal government's policies for veterans and the future of Canadian aviation would be strengthened by more representation.

The (428) Peterborough Wing was awarded the Air Marshal Curtis award for the wing with more than 150 members obtaining the most members during the past year.

Jardine announced the association's support of the Royal Canadian Air Force memorial project, planned for the base at Trenton, Ont.

To cost $3½ million dollars, the memorial will take the form of a chapel and activity complex which will be open to servicemen, their dependents and community groups.

Plans and a model of the complex were unveiled at the base Sunday by Defence Minister Leo Cadieux.

Jardine said the project is hoped to be completed by Battle of Britain Sunday in 1971.

The meeting ends Saturday.

Non-Property Voters Increase Slightly

Only a slight increase was reported today by the four main municipalities in non-property owning voters.

The combined total for Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt this year is 3,848 persons compared with 3,729 over last year, an increase of 119.

Property owners automatically go on the municipal voters list. Non-property owners must register or re-confirm in order to be eligible. The deadline for registration was Tuesday afternoon.

Victoria has 2,525 resident and tenant voters this year, an increase of two over 1968. Oak Bay was second with 730 persons this year, an increase of five.

Saanich recorded the biggest increase—up 125 persons to 453. Esquimalt dropped 13 to 140.

Figures for the number of property-owning voters have not been completed.

But 1968, there were 29,455 property-owning voters in Saanich, 18,119 in Victoria, 8,506 in Oak Bay and 4,287 in Esquimalt.

Building Rockets Ahead On Apartment Bonanza

Riding a crest of apartment construction, southern Vancouver Island building continues to boom, undeterred by high interest rates and inflation.

Permits worth $59.2 million have been issued in the first nine months in Victoria, Saanich, Oak Bay, Sidney, Esquimalt and North Saanich.

This is up $20 million over the same period last year.

Victoria city continued to set the pace, with permits worth $29.2 million this year, up almost $10 million over the same period last year.

Apartments provided the big boost—30 were started to provide a total of 1,540 suites at a total cost of $13.6 million.

Saanich was second with this year's permits totalling $18.3 million, up $6 million on last year's first nine-month period.

OAK BAY DOUBLE

Apartment and educational construction helped the increase with house construction falling off. There were 312 houses and duplexes worth $6.6. million this year compared with 365 worth $7.1 million in the same period last year.

Oak Bay, boosted by the apartment boom as well as educational buildings, more than doubled its activity—to $5.7 million from $2.1 million in the first nine months of 1968.

Other areas, last year's corresponding figures in brackets: Sidney $2.7 million (2.2 million); Esquimalt $2.1 million ($1.5 million); North Saanich $1.5 million ($1 million).

Up-to-date figures were not available from Central Saanich municipality and the unorganized areas of Langford, Colwood and Metchosin.

Ask The Times

Q. Could you give me a count of the actual number of seats taken by each party in the recent West German elections? L.M.

A. There are 496 seats in the Bundestag. Of these, the Social Democrats won 224, the Free Democrats received 30 and the Christian Democrats, 242.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ON THE DAY WE arrived in Victoria with a pair of Toronto-born children, we fell violently in love with the house we still occupy. What we didn't realize when we signed the papers, however, was that we were acquiring much more than the makings of a home.

We also inherited a set of neighbors who were committed to living life on their own terms. They made no attempt to keep up with the Joneses. The Joneses, if they were so minded, could adapt to them.

One of these neighbors was Mrs. Mac. I will not wish peace to her gallant spirit, because a state of nirvana would bore that extraordinary woman.

★

She was fond of referring to herself as an aged lady, but her eyes, her manner and her carriage gave that claim the lie. Mrs. Mac was insufferably arrogant, opinionated in the extreme, and fierce as a hawk. But she became our good friend, and remained so until she died.

We had heard of her in The Village, which I actually heard someone call Cadboro Bay shopping centre the other day. Mrs. Mac, we gathered, was something of a legend there . . . a grand dame imperious as she was wiful. So we carefully avoided intruding on her, and told our children that they must on no account cross the unfenced property line into her territory.

★

But we were uneasily aware of her presence behind the planted laurel and self-sprung underbrush that made a division between properties.

Sometimes we heard her issuing orders to her Chinese houseboy, Sam, or arguing with her twice-a-week gardener, Leong Foon. Then one day we glimpsed her through a break in the screen. She was smiling, not at us, but at our children where they played with considerable noise and vigor on our summer-parched back lawn.

A week or so later, Mrs. Mac parted the greenery and stepped with great dignity upon our turf.

She introduced herself, gracefully and with the charm that was hers to summon when she was so minded.

Would we come to tea one day? And would we tell our children that they could play in her garden and visit her in her house whenever they wished?

Lucky kids! They didn't know it at the time, but they had come into possession of a supplementary grandmother who gave, and was to receive, affection and unwavering loyalty.

As for Win and me, we had launched on a friendship that endured all gales for some very good years.

In time, I learned to predict those tempests with reasonable certainty. Mrs. Mac, even with her old-age pension achieved, could endure only so much calm.

But the first encounter took me by surprise.

★

I was clipping lawn edges when she issued her now-familiar summons: a "Hoo-hoo" like a melodious owl call.

"Bill," she said, "I have been wondering about that tree."

The fir in question, big and old, with a forked top of the sort that oldtime loggers called a school-ma'rm, straddled the property line well down the slope.

"It worries me," said Mrs. Mac.

She sketched a gesture of a tree toppling. "If it falls, it will strike my roof."

★

"Impossible," I told her. "But if you're worried, I'll pace the distance out."

"I'm going to have it cut down," she said. And in a mock-generous concession, "Naturally, we'll share the firewood."

The tree still stands. Mrs. Mac loved it, and would have interposed her person between it and destruction. What she wanted, and all she wanted, was a brannigan to stir up the too-languid air.

"You shouldn't have spoken to her like that," my gentle wife chided later.

"Yeah," I agreed, feeling like a dog. "After all, she's old and alone in that big house. Do you think I should go over and patch things up?"

About then, the goose-necked wall phone with which we communicated at that time, jangled twice. It was Mrs. Mac, merry and bright, suggesting a drink before dinner.

Through the years, and without so much as nicking friendship, we tangled on a diversity of subjects. Public school against private school. Should children sit at table with their elders. Identity of a songbird which we scared off its twig with our intemperate quarrel.

But there were other times. I can remember a lavish Christmas at Mrs. Mac's house, and another at ours when she listened to carol records.

★

She sat entranced as a child, our children sharing a hassock beside her. When Mahalia Jackson sang the Cherry Tree Ballad in her rich voice, the grand lady wept.

We were away on a holiday when Mrs. Mac died. Another neighbor broke the news, and we knew that something good had been removed from our lives.

She was perverse and kind, arbitrary and gentle. We missed her for a long time, and our children for longer.

Gorton Election Issue

By VINCENT MATTHEWS
CP Correspondent

CANBERRA (CP)—Prime Minister John Gorton is looming as the main issue in the Australian federal elections due Oct. 25.

The man, his ability, personality and suitability for the job are being vigorously discussed by the Australian people.

This is the first federal election for Gorton and for opposition Labor Leader Gough Whitlam as respective party leaders. The election campaign spotlight will be on these two men rather than on the parties they represent.

Gorton's Liberal party has been in a coalition government with the Country party since 1949. At the last federal election, in 1966, the late prime minister Harold Holt won a record majority in the House of Representatives. It is considered highly unlikely that Gorton can retain the present majority of 36 in a house of 124 members.

Gorton came to power as Liberal party leader and thus prime minister in January, 1968, just over a month after Harold Holt was drowned while swimming off a Victoria beach.

FOUGHT FOR JOB

He was chosen in a close contest of Liberal party members of Parliament. Unlike his predecessors, Holt and Sir Robert Menzies, who were elected party leaders unanimously, Gorton had to fight for the top job.

This lack of unanimous party support has worried Gorton ever since. His concern reached its peak in March when attacks were made on his suitability and credibility. It was then disclosed that he had escorted a 19-year-old girl from a party and taken her to the United States embassy at one o'clock in the morning.

Leading the attacks was a Sydney barrister, Edward St. John, who called Gorton a "hillbilly" prime minister who didn't have the capacity or the intellect for the job.

It appeared at the time that Gorton had won the issue, because St. John was unable to get any support for his campaign against Gorton among his fellow Liberal party members. So St. John resigned from the Liberal party and is fighting this coming election as an Independent Liberal.

But now party and government members are wondering just how much damage was done to Gorton's image by those attacks six months ago.

This concern was given substance by a poll which shows that Gorton's popularity has dropped six per cent since April.

DOUBTS SET IN

Gorton was chosen by his Liberal party colleagues as leader last year because it was felt he had vote-winning appeal.

Party strategists now have their doubts whether this image is the right one to impress Australians. Sir Robert Menzies was the most effective vote-winner in Australian history and he said he was "British to my boot heels." He was aloof, arrogant and often pompous. But Aussies admired him as a man who could give the outside world a fine image of a sophisticated man from down under.

Adding to Gorton's complications is the fact that he has tried to break with the Menzies-Holt tradition. He has stressed the need for improved social services, which is usually the line of the opposition Labor party. He does not inspire the same confidence in the rich, conservative businessmen of the major cities, Sydney and Melbourne.

What makes it harder for Gorton is that the first time for 15 years, the Labor party appears united and strong as the election approaches. The Labor party has torn itself apart since 1954 in faction fights. But under Gough Whitlam's leadership the party has developed the image over the last few months of being an alternative government.

The polls show the government still with a six-per-cent lead over labor, but if the trend continues during the next weeks before the election, many of those Liberal members who voted for Gorton as leader last year could find themselves out of Parliament and Gorton's power base would be eroded.

There is wide agreement that for the first time for many years, this election could be a bitterly, closely fought contest.

EARTHQUAKE damage in California, from strongest tremors recorded in that state in 12 years, includes Santa Rosa hotel wall which collapsed (left) crushing car examined by patrolman (right). Three separate tremors, two Wednesday night and one early today, injured at least 24 persons, disrupted electrical service and broke gas and water mains. There was no report of fatalities. Halt-Blast Drive Fails

Amchitka Test On Schedule

Times News Services

A chorus of protests, official and otherwise, failed to halt a scheduled underground nuclear explosion on Amchitka Island in the North Pacific today.

And the United States Atomic Energy Commission said this morning three earthquakes in California overnight and early today in no way affected its plans.

Thousands of persons in Canada and elsewhere have protested the Amchitka blast, fearing it would cause a tremor in the earthquake-prone Aleutian chain.

More Than 7,000 Protest

Protests reached a climax Wednesday with demonstrations along the Canadian-United States border involving more than 7,000 students in British Columbia alone. The student protest, conceived by the University of Victoria student union, was enacted at points from Halifax to Victoria.

(See stories on pages 3 and 40 for details on Vancuover and local demonstrations Wednesday.)

Canada and Japan, both damaged by the 1964 Alaska earthquake, have filed formal objections with Washington.

Meanwhile, Alaska Gov. Keith Miller again defended the test, saying he is convinced the protests are "a well-financed, highly organized international movement."

MILLER
. . . defends tests

Tidal Wave News at 8:30 p.m.

Scientists at Victoria's Dominion Astrophysical Observatory on Little Saanich Mountain said today the shock waves from the blast would register on their seismic monitors approximately seven minutes after the 3 p.m. explosion.

If a tidal wave is generated by the nuclear test, they say, it will reach Tofino on Vancouver Island's west coast about 8:30 p.m. tonight.

Emergency measures organizations, municipal, provincial and state authorities and civil defence systems were poised today for action should the blast trigger a tidal wave.

At Port Alberni, which suffered heavy damage in a tidal wave following the 1964 earthquake, civic authorities have established an elaborate warning and evacuation plan which would be triggered by an alert from Victoria.

The Washington State Civil Defence System is prepared to alert coastal communities if a need for evacuation arises, and various U.S. agencies are planning increased radiation monitoring this month in connection with the blast.

On windswept Amchitka Island, 1,400 miles southwest of Anchorage, Alaska, scientists and technicians made ready monitoring devices and television cameras to record the one-megaton blast, equal to the detonation of 1,000,000 tons of TNT.

Robert Miller, operations manager for the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, told reporters Wednesday:

EARTHQUAKE KILLS 10

LIMA, Peru (AP)—Ten persons were killed and 50 injured in an earthquake Wednesday in the central state of Junin, authorities reported today.

The tremor destroyed about 300 houses in several small villages near Huancayo, about 180 miles east of Lima.

Marine Service Cut Back

By PAT DUFOUR

Prime Minister Trudeau's decision to reduce federal government spending has thrown a left hook at the Victoria Marine Services Base.

Larry Slaght, district manager of the department of transport's marine services branch, said today his operating budget has lost more than $400,000.

This is the amount expected to be paid in salaries and wage increases during the current fiscal year.

The money won't come from the government's central fund as in past years, but from the base's budget of $4.8 million.

Slaght says balancing his budget will probably require laying off one of three servicing vessels (Estevan, Douglas or Camsell) for the winter season.

Depending on the effectiveness of other economy measures, he adds, it may be necessary to put one vessel in mothballs completely.

Slaght is confident the reductions will not mean dismissal of permanent employees.

"However," he adds, "it does mean that a lot of casual labor such as stewards and oilers, will have to go."

NEW METHODS

He says his department will have to develop new methods of operation in order to maintain efficiency and still remain within his budget.

"We will have to use helicopters more than we do now. We have three based at Pat Bay. The weather ships Quadra and Vancouver will be closed down while in port and maintenance work done by day labor, rather than the permanent crew."

Slaght has 30 lighthouse stations and about 600 unwatched lights in his area. He says that it will be necessary to switch to more semi-automatic stations. Major construction will be reduced where it does not involve service efficiency.

"Some of our lighthouse-keepers with dilapidated living quarters may have to wait a while for repairs."

He says the government's decision to spend $1 billion on northern development is the main reason for reduction.

Capital Gains Tax Studied by Tories

TORONTO (CP) — Conservative Leader Robert Stanfield called today for an easing of the tax burden on lower-income groups and said there are strong equity arguments for a capital gains tax.

He told the Empire Club here that he strongly feels "the present level of exemptions on personal income tax just cannot be justified in terms of its relative burden on lower income groups."

Mr. Stanfield said exemption levels should be adjusted for the lower-income groups, but not at the expense of introducing new inequities for those in higher brackets.

Revenue lost from the adjustment must be found elsewhere, he said.

"If you are doctrinaire about these things, it is easy enough to talk about socking it to those in, say, the $10,000 to $20,000 a year group.

"But they already pay a heavier personal income tax than their counterparts in the U.S. So long as the brain drain concerns us, we should try to avoid a tax system that places us at too great a disadvantage vis-a-vis the U.S. in this respect."

TAX REFORM

Mr. Stanfield also said a capital gains tax, as part of an over-all package of tax reform, "has to be given very serious consideration."

It would not be a good policy to simply pile a capital gains tax on top of the present system, he said.

"Certainly, on grounds of equity, there are strong arguments for taxing capital gains as well as income.

Mr. Stanfield said the Conservative party policy conference in Niagara Falls, Ont. Oct. 9-13 will have to take into account several important practical considerations related to a capital gains tax.

"For example, what special consideration can be devised with regard to gains arising from the sale of the family farm, the family home or the family business.

"Again, since most capital gains arise over a relatively long period of time, what account should be taken of this in establishing rates?

These questions must be considered in the context of the whole tax system.

"I believe a capital gains tax proposal could only be implemented in the context of a system where the rate structure applying to all types of income is appropriate and does not seem to be confiscatory."

TREMORS HINT RUSSIA TESTING

WASHINGTON (AP) — The U.S. Atomic Energy Commission has reported another seismic disturbance from a region of the Soviet Union used for underground nuclear tests.

The first disturbance, announced Sunday, was recorded south of Volgograd. A disturbance was recorded Wednesday in the Semipalainsk region of Siberia, the AEC said.

While unable to determine the cause of the disturbances, the AEC indicated they were caused by the explosion of a low to intermediate range nuclear device, comparing with detonation of 20,000 to 200,000 tons of TNT.

Grain Hopes Rise At Gromyko Talks

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government is optimistic that Russia will agree to buy a huge quantity of wheat still outstanding under the 1966 Soviet-Canadian wheat agreement, a qualified source said today.

Fulfilment by the Soviet Union of the terms of the agreement would mean a big boost for the ailing Western Canada farm economy. Some 133,000,000 bushels of wheat and flour remain to be purchased under the three-year deal, which technically expired two months ago.

An external affairs department spokesman, giving reporters a fill-in on talks here today between Canadian officials and visiting Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, said the Canadian side was "satisfied" with the progress of discussions on the wheat deal.

These discussions occupied about one-third of the 2½ hours which the Russians and Canadians, led by External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp, spent in closed conference.

The official refused to elaborate. Asked a further question later, however, he said the Canadian side is optimistic the remaining grain will be sold to the Soviets.

DISCUSS OTHER SUBJECTS

This was the strongest expression of hopefulness yet made by a Canadian official that the Soviets will eventually honor their obligations. He emphasized that Canada has never stated that Russia is in default on the deal.

Discussion of the wheat deal was to be taken up again at subsequent meetings during Mr. Gromyko's two-day visit here, which ends Friday.

Other topics touched upon today included Soviet-Canadian scientific and cultural exchanges, and the comparative positions of the two sides in respect to the application of international law to Arctic waters.

California Quake Worst in 12 Years

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP)—At least 24 persons were injured by two earthquakes that ruined two houses here Wednesday night, knocked out electrical power and broke gas and water mains.

No fatalities were reported.

A third tremor, milder than the first two, was recorded between 5:27 and 5:28 a.m. PDT today.

The tremors centred at Santa Rosa, 60 miles north of San Francisco, but were felt as far south as Gilroy, 75 miles south of San Francisco.

A 20-foot wide section of brick wall fell from the third storey of the Miramar Bar to the street, heavily damaging a parked automobile.

Pacific Gas and Electric Co. said electrical power was off for eight minutes in the city of nearly 50,000 residents. The utility called in emergency crews and had 50 men shutting off leaking gas mains. One small fire was extinguished before there was serious damage.

Water from broken pipes caused damage in one department store.

MOST WERE OUT

Injured persons were taken to three hospitals in the Santa Rosa area. Most suffered cuts caused by broken glass, although there was one report of a broken neck.

One house was jolted four feet off its foundations and another was so badly rocked that it probably will have to be torn down.

Seismologists at the University of California in Berkeley said the first quake was at 9:56 p.m. PDT and the second

AIR SERVICE HAMPERED BY WALKOUTS

TORONTO (CP) — Airline schedules from Regina to Ottawa were threatened today as a wildcat strike of 120 Ontario airport technicians spread to Saskatchewan and Manitoba.

The 120 Ontario technicians, members of Local 2228, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers, were joined this morning by 100 Winnipeg members of the union, affecting operations at Winnipeg International Airport.

Haynsworth Withdrawal?

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional sources said today Judge Clement F. Haynsworth has asked President Nixon to withdraw his nomination for a seat on the United States Supreme Court, but the White House said its latest information "indicates that this report is absolutely untrue."

Girls Fire-Bomb U.S. Consulate

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two girls were being sought by police today, following a fire-bomb incident Wednesday at the U.S. Consulate office, on the second floor of a downtown building.

Witnesses saw one girl, aged about 20, throw a plastic bottle toward the office. It hit the door jamb and exploded into flames, damaging the floor and wall.

The girls fled down a fire exit, but were caught within seconds by Vice-Consul Norman Del Giante and consulate customer Dilip Nelson.

"We brought them upstairs and I opened the lobby door to see how bad the fire was," said Mr. Nelson. "The flames shot into my face and burned my eyebrows off. The girls ran away again. I ran after one and caught her.

"I was holding her against the wall and said: 'Cool it, you started the fire.' She said: 'Yeah, man, they were going to kill millions Thursday.'

"Then the building commissionaire came up. He told us to sort out our troubles outside the place and I told him the girl had started a fire on the second floor.

"He wrenched my arm away and she got away again."

Consul-General Milton C. Rewinkle said the bomb missed the door and bounced off into the lobby.

"If it had come in it would have gone right under the desk of our young receptionist," he said. "It would have been disastrous.

Other witnesses said they saw the girls carrying the bottle in the lobby. "There's a bomb in there—everyone get out," the girls said.

No Proof Biafra Mercenaries Coming From Canada, UN Told

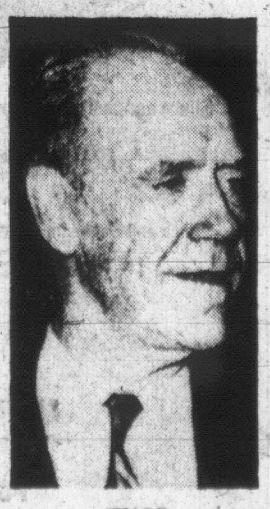

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canadian officials said Wednesday a charge by federal Nigeria's foreign affairs spokesman that Canadians are serving as mercenaries in breakaway Biafra was unproven.

Canadians here were visibly startled when Okoi Arikpo, Nigeria's external affairs minister, told the General Assembly that Canadians were among nationals of several Western nations fighting with the Biafrans in the Nigerian civil war.

The unofficial attitude among members of the Canadian delegations was one of hurt. They pointed out that Canada has attempted to play a neutral role in the war and has poured millions of dollars of aid into the western African area.

Arikpo told the Assembly:

"There is no longer any secret from where the rebel regime, which has no economic resources and which for two years had no export trade whatsoever, continues to obtain the hard currency to pay for the modern weapons it uses against the fatherland and with which it pays those mercenaries from Sweden, France, Canada, Portugal, Belgium, South Africa, Rhodesia, the United States of America and other Western countries. . . ."

SHARP

AERIAL WAR

These "racist renegades and their compeers" had openly raised money in their own countries "with which they wage a war, often an aerial war, against Nigeria, and with which they finance and conduct a campaign of vilification" aimed at dismembering Nigeria.

Canadian officials were clearly taken aback by Arikpo's speech.

External Affairs Minister Sharp had talked with Arikpo only last week and it was reported the Nigerian had given no indication he would make such a statement.

Sharp also discussed the Biafran question with Nigeria, representatives of Biafra and other African countries who support the Biafran cause while he was here.

There were indications Wednesday night that Canada was still seeking clarification of the Nigerian position and it was reported that the Canadian mission here was in touch with the external affairs department in Ottawa shortly after Arikpo's speech.

About two hours after the Nigerian spoke, the Canadian mission issued a statement saying the charge Canadians are serving as mercenaries had not been proven.

Oil Leaks $500

MONTREAL (CP) — The captain of a 3,500-ton German freighter has been fined $500 because his ship spilled about 12 gallons of crude oil into the St. Lawrence River near Montreal.

Capt. Uwe Borchers, 36, said the oil leaked from a faulty fuel coupling on his ship, the Christiane Schulte.

French Fighting Again in Chad Revolt

PARIS (Reuters) — French troops are fighting their first prolonged campaign since the Algerian war in the vast, sparsely populated central African country of Chad where nomadic rebels are challenging the government.

The fighting has all the characteristics of a classic guerrilla war—ambushes, no fixed battle lines, accusations that the rebels are receiving external aid and a government facing an elusive enemy.

The intervention of the French soldiers, spearheaded by 400 Foreign Legion paratroops, has been cloaked in official silence here since it started in August.

But official French sources now say there are about 1,500 French troops in the landlocked country which is twice the size of France and has a population of 3,500,000.

The French troops joined in the fighting against the rebels after President Francois Tombalbaye of Chad asked for their help under a defence agreement with France.

The French troops are fighting in the centre and east of the country, say latest reports here.

The rebels, who oppose the government for tribal reasons and because of various administrative policies, appear to have their main strength in the north, an area inhabited by mainly nomadic Moslem tribes.

Travellers returning from Chad recently say there also are substantial pockets of rebels in some southern regions near the borders with the Central African Republic and Cameroun.

RELATIONS ARE TENSE

Tombalbaye, who has ruled Chad since it became independent from France in 1960, has his capital at Fort Lamy in the extreme southwest of the country.

Relations have never been easy between the nomadic northerners, a mixture of Arab, Berber and Negro peoples, and the more settled southerners.

The rebel leader, Dr. Abba Sidick, lives in Tripoli, Libya, where he works at a hospital.

He has denied government accusations that his movement, the National Chad Liberation Front, is helped from abroad.

The Liberation Front, founded in Khartoum, Sudan, in 1966 by Ibrahim Abatcha, launched its first attack on an administrative and police post in Chad in September, 1967.

Abatcha was killed in battle early in 1968.

Recent press reports from Chad say the Foreign Legionnaires have killed more than 200 rebels in the last four months while the French have suffered only one accidental death.

Farmers Told to Seek Broad, National Base

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Roy Atkinson, president of the National Farmers Union, warned Tuesday that Canadian farmers must fight against government policies which would "lock them" into narrow provincial structures.

Mr. Atkinson told a convention of the NFU's Ontario region that farmers must be united on as broad a base as possible in order to meet the economic pressure of multi-national corporations.

"If you're going to build a countervailing power against the power of the corporations you can't do it by being locked into a provincial or a commodity-producers' organization. You have to do it on a national base."

His warning was in keeping with most of the proceedings at the two-day convention which ended Tuesday, marking the end of 17 years of independent action by the Ontario Farmers Union and its integration into the NFU, founded in Winnipeg last July.

REFLECT OLD GOALS

Many resolutions approved by the 500 delegates and transferred to the national level reflect traditional policy, goals and grievances of the provincial organization. Principle resolutions included proposals for:

—Creation of national grain and meat authorities to be controlled by farmers and with power to bargain collectively for higher prices;

—Withholding of beef cattle from the North American market in an effort to "bring the buyers to the table" to give farmers a bigger share of high retail prices;

—Publication of a French-language edition of the NFU monthly, The Union Farmer;

—Development of collective bargaining in purchase of "inputs"—the goods such as fertilizer, twine, machinery which farmers must purchase from farm-supply corporations.

Plane Theft Plot Charged By Lebanese

BEIRUT (Reuters) — Two wounded Russians, one a senior diplomat, were under close guard in a military hospital here Wednesday after a late night gun battle in which Lebanese military police claimed to have smashed a bizarre spy plot.

An official Lebanese statement said that the Russians—embassy First Secretary Alexandre Khomiakov and Vladimir Vasiliev—planned to bribe a dismissed Lebanese air force officer to steal a French-built Lebanese Mirage jet fighter for them.

The bribe—a cheque for $200,000—was seized from the Russians along with $2,500 in $20 bills of U.S. currency when military police raided a Soviet diplomat's apartment Tuesday night.

The statement did not say whether the flyer, Hassan Badawi, dismissed as a pilot officer for misconduct five years ago, was in the apartment when the police burst in. But it said all three were arrested.

It said one of the Russians was severely wounded in the gun fight but did not say which one. Two policemen, one an officer, also were wounded in the fray.

The Lebanese statement said Badawi was to have been paid to steal a Mirage, main weapon of the tiny Lebanese air force.

But it did not say where it was to have been flown.

Elk Lake Curbs On Waterskiing Surfacing Again

Water ski regulations on Elk Lake in Saanich will be considered soon by the municipal parks and recreation committee.

From there, the proposals will go to a public hearing, Ald. William Noel, chairman of parks and outdoor recreation committee, said Wednesday.

"It hasn't died," he said, referring to the three months which have passed since the proposed regulations were referred to the municipal solicitor.

"I just phoned this morning to get an appointment for a meeting of the parks and recreation committee on the meetings agenda."

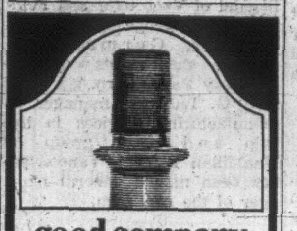

He said the long delay was due to a number of legal ramifications in the proposals and questions as to what a municipality can and cannot do legally. There also had been discussions with senior medical health officer Dr. J. L. M. Whitbread and the federal transport department.

Ald. Noel said the meeting of the parks and recreation committee should be held in the next week or two.

DISCUSSIONS

The earlier proposals included police permits for boats with engines over 10 horsepower, protection of areas designated for swimming and the water intake for the Saanich Peninsula, a specific course for water skiers to follow and penalties including impounding of speedboats on the first offence.

General agreement on the tougher proposals has been voiced both by water skiers and by the Elk Lake and Saanich Ratepayers Association.

PANASONIC

Shouldn't it be the other way around?

Some people buy color TV's because they look nice. In the store. And when they get the sets home, they own a beautiful piece of furniture. And a nice color TV.

We think it should be the other way around.

At Panasonic, we make the color part of the color TV like it was the only part you were buying. That's why we design and make every vital component ourselves. That way, we don't put together color TV's. We make them.

And we put a lot of special things inside our color TV's. Like Panalock. Which makes fine tuning as automatic as pressing a button. And which adjusts itself everytime you switch channels.

And we put in Speed-O-Vision to give you picture and sound. Quickly. That way, you don't need an appointment with your television.

And a color indicator light that automatically tells you when color is being broadcast.

And we put in a few other devices like something to keep your picture from getting messed up everytime your neighbor runs his power tools.

And something to keep color from creeping into your black and white picture. And to give you absolute color purity all the time. On every channel. And even a special device that gives you strong color in weak reception areas.

So stop in at any Panasonic dealer. Our cabinets are handsome. And our color is worth watching.

Season's New TV Shows Offer Little Extraordinary Appeal

By RICK DU BROW

HOLLYWOOD (UPI)—Comedian Herb Shriner used to tell how they once held a beauty contest in his home town and nobody won. By parallel association, we come today to an assessment of the season's new television series.

If you were asked to name the better programs of the new season, you would have to include CBS-TV's interview with Soviet writer-defector Anatoly Kuznetsov, and NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" talk with Stalin's daughter, and ABC-TV's "Folk Gospel Music Festival" and CBS-TV's Woody Allen Special. But no series, really, has anything extraordinary about it.

HUMOROUS ROMANCE

Several, of course, have something to recommend them. For example, ABC-TV's "Love, American Style," a weekly group of humorous contemporary tales of romance, is most promising.

NBC-TV's "Then Came Bronson," with Michael Parks as a sort of motorcycle replacement for the old nomad cowboy hero—here today to straighten things out, then gone tomorrow—has a strong star, fine photography and a good contemporary touch.

ABC-TV's "Room 222," about a Negro history teacher and his associates in an integrated high school, is a nice mixture of contemporary message-melodrama and wry humor (provided by Michael Constantine as a world-weary principal).

COSBY STRONG

NBC-TV's Bill Cosby comedy, meanwhile, has a tremendously strong and appealing star, and I like the way plots give way in his show to something like extended monologues concerning people, the way things are and cool attitudes—via vignettes.

One standard situation comedy, CBS-TV's "The Governor and J.J.," offers some pleasant banter of an escapist kind by Dan Dailey (the governor) and Julie Sommers (as his daughter). Miss Sommers is surely video's female catch of the season.

So much for those new shows that seem to have more to offer than the others. There are, however, two new hour-long soap-opera type serials that are very fancily done (I mean for sheer plushness). One is NBC-TV's "Bracken's World," about a movie studio. The other is ABC-TV's "The Survivors," focusing on those parasitic bums known as the beautiful people. Given a chance in the right time slots, both shows could catch on.

CROSBY CLAN INCREASING

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The arrival at Hollywood Presbyterian Hospital of Lindsay H. Crosby Jr. makes Bing Crosby a grandfather for the fifth time. The father is Lindsay Crosby. It was announced that his wife Susan gave birth to their first child Tuesday night.

Berthanova Recital Lacking in Interest

By AUDREY JOHNSON

Victoria Symphony guest artist, Eva Bernathova, in her solo recital at McPherson Playhouse, Wednesday, proved conclusively that she has ample power and keyboard facility.

In contrast to the restrained, almost muted performance of the Beethoven Concerto in the weekend concerts, Bernathova unleashed masses of tone and racing tempos in the virtuosic Liszt B. minor Sonata and at times in the Beethoven No. 30.

Curiously enough, however, her entire program lacked, for me, the charm and interest of her concerto performance.

INACCURACIES

It is possible that the three concerts and university campus recital she had already given had tired her.

But can this, and the fact that there were a number of inaccuracies, notably in her Beethoven sonata, be accepted in an artist with a claim to international status?

The Debussy miniatures had pleasurable moments and the scintillating virtuosity of "Fireworks" was well handled.

But the Janacek Sonata and even the gorgeous Beethoven variations were uninspired to the point of dullness with lacklustre inflections in the shaping and development of phrases and therefore an absence of growth and drama.

Rebellion Threatens

EDMONTON (CP) — A brief prepared for the Alberta government says that if Ottawa abolishes Indian reserves it could provoke civil disturbances that would make the Riel rebellion of 1885 look like a "kindergarten picnic." The brief was prepared by Prof. L. C. Green, political scientist and international law expert at University of Alberta.
